Million Troops To Guard Rumania against Possible Invasion by Hungarians

King Carol's Government Yields to Soviet by Giving Up Bessarabia and Northern Bucovina

By The Associated Press

Rumania gave in last (Thursday) night to a Soviet Russian demand for great slices of territory, then massed most of her army of 1,500,000 on the Hungarian frontier to protect Transylvania from a possible Hungarian attempt at seizure.

By ultimatum Russia got Bessarabia and northern Bucovina. King Carol's government yielded just short of the deadline.

There were indications that Germany and Italy consented to this new Red coup.

A Swiss radio broadcast heard in London asserted that in addition to demanding Bessarabia, Northern Bucovina and control of certain ports, Russia likewise insisted upon taking over the Rumanian oil fields—one of Europe's greatest sources of a vital military supply.

To all this, said the Swiss radio, Rumania agreed.

Some New York business and financial circles disclosed the receipt of information that Germany had made "sensational" peace overtures to Britain, but Berlin informants dismissed as "nonsense" rumors of such feelers.

These reports, considered authentic by those who received them and declared to have reached this country through neutral sources, suggested that Germany had offered to leave Great Britain with about ninety-five per cent of her empire providing, however, Gibraltar and the Suez canal were internationalized.

Even as these reports were heard, however, Britain's minister of supplies, Herbert Morrison, declared in an empire broadcast that England would "hold on and hold out in the very jaws of the enemy — while the rest of the civilized world mobilizes its resources for victory."

Britain, already prepared against invasion, was told by her leaders that she must prepare for offensive warfare. At the same time it became ever clearer that important French fleet and field units were ready to fight on in aid of Britain, despite the French surrender.

Italian informants asserted that a direct attack on England, in cooperation with German forces, "is not to be excluded."

The German press centered its attention on this same subject, trumpeting threats against Britain.

Rumanian Press Remains Silent On Ultimatum

Soviet Troops Will Occupy Ceded Areas when Details Are Worked Out

BUCHAREST, June 27 (AP)—Rumania bowed tonight to a Soviet demand for great areas of her territory, and moved nearly 2,000,000 men into Transylvania to meet an expected Hungarian attempt to regain that former Magyar province.

Despite earlier reports that Red troops already were on the march, it was disclosed late tonight that Russia had greed to hold back from the actual occupation of the ceded areas—Bessarabia and Northern Buccovina—until the last details of the capitulation had been worked out. Diplomats labored at that task. It is expected to be completed tomorrow and that Soviet troops then would cross the frontier.

Press Is Censored

The capital was quiet tonight. The officially censored press still was not permitted to publish a word of the Red ultimatum or of King Carol's acceptance.

Whether she fights or not, whether Bulgaria presses her own territorial claim for Southern Dobruja or lets it lie, Roumania, World War heir to Balkan supremacy was well on the road to dismemberment.

It is a road that winds through Munich, through Czecho-Slovakia and Poland to Finland and back again to France.

Apparently Germany and Italy gave their consent to Russia's latest coup. Axis ministers were in long and earnest consultation with King Carol II in his hours of deliberation.

There were reports in Bucharest that the Soviet troops, quickly following up the Rumanian capitulation, already were advancing across the frontiers of Bessarabia and Northern Bucovina, taking up the territory which Russia won by laying a piece of paper on a Bucharest council table and flexing her military muscles.

Warships Occupy Constanta

Warships of the Red fleet were reported also to have steamed into the Rumanianu Black Sea harbor of Constanta which Russia is said to have demanded as a naval base.

Rumania, rich in oil and grain, but poor in strategic location and useful alliances, decided she must give in to Russia—that no calling into force of her months of military preparedness could alter the final result.

Hence she yielded just short of a 10 p. m. (3 p. m., est) deadline for her peaceful assent and agreed to discuss details later.

A Rumanian communique, issued shortly after 8 p. m., signified the acceptance of the demands. Its reference to an invitation to Russian representatives to discuss the de-

Hungary Quivers As Soviet Army Invades Balkans

Hitler Promises Territorial Aspirations of Hungary "Will Be Met"

BUDAPEST, June 27 (AP)—Soviet Russia reached across the Danube and thrust the hammer and a sickle deep toward the Balkan spheres of Germany and Italy today in a new map-shuffle which set southeastern Europe aquiver.

Against a background of mobilizing armies and centuries of racial and national rivalry the question tonight was whether Hungary and Bulgaria would accept the Russian coup as a signal for a complete Rumanian break-up.

The reliable report that Hungary's premier, Count Pal Teleki, had received a letter from Adolf Hitler promising him that Hungary's territorial aspirations "will be met" was one straw in the wind.

But reports that Rumania was secretly mobilizing reserves to reinforce 1,500,000 or more men already under arms and rushing them to her western frontier may restrain Hungary at this time.

Rumania tonight cut off all telephone communications with her neighbors, veiling her moves.

These reports suggested that King Carol had made his peace with Josef Stalin at great sacrifice in the hope of saving the big province of Transylvania from Hungary and Southern Dobruja from Bulgaria.

There was no sign of exceptional military activity in Budapest, but Hungary was know to have large forces gathered near the frontier of Transylvania, which she lost in the World War.

The Hungarian cabinet met, and it was assumed it discussed the situation.

The German and Italian ministers called upon the Hungarian premier and foreign minister upon the Hungarian premier and foreign minister, but whether to give assurance of support of her claims of Rumania or to counsel restraint was not known.

The Hungarian government radio announcement of Carol's acceptance of the Soviet demand commented:

"Thus the integrity of the Rumanian territory, about which so many debates have been heard in the last twenty years, exists no more."

King Boris, of Bulgaria, presided over an extraordinary crown council meeting at his country palace outside Sofia after repeated conference on the Balkan situation.

Officials in Bulgaria expressed doubt that any move toward Dobrudja would be made until results of the Soviet action become known.

Bulgaria also has called up reservists, and Bulgarian newspapers printed long article son Balkans

President Gives Authority To Assure Safety Of Vessels

Step Is Interpreted as Laying Groundwork for Possible Detention of Eight French Ships

Navy To Build Sixty-Eight Warships; Army Places Orders for Nearly 1,000 Armored Cars

WASHINGTON, June 27 (AP) — President Roosevelt, in a step interpreted as laying the groundwork for possible detention of French ships, today authorized seizure of foreign vessels in American waters if necessary to protect this country's interest, or the safety of the ships themselves.

The chief executive acted under the Espionage Act of 1917 to grant this power to Secretary of the Treasury Morganthau along with other broad powers of control over both domestic and foreign vessels. Both the coast guard and the customs office are units of the treasury department.

The White House said in a statement that Mr. Roosevelt's action was supplementary to his proclamation of a limited national emergency last September.

A high official, who would not be quoted by name, told reporters the order could be interpreted as clearing the way for possible detention not only of French ships in American waters but also of vessels of other German-dominated countries of Europe.

French ships now in American ports include the huge luxury liner, Normandie, at New York; the San Francisco and Leopold L. D. at New York; the Vannes and Wisconsin at Los Angeles; the tanker Merope, at Chester, Pa.; the Winnepeg at Miami, and the tanker Scheherzade at Corpus Christi, Tex.

The power to seize foreign vessels also was granted to the governor of the Panama Canal.

The fact that the ships may be seized "to secure observance of the rights and obligations of the the United States" attracted particular interest.

War Debt Stressed

It was recalled that Stephen T. Early, presidential secretary, told reporters last Monday that the White House had received hundreds of communications suggesting seizure of French western hemisphere possessions or French merchant vessels, as payment on the French war debt.

Republicans Nominate Political Miracle Man On the Sixth Ballot

Break to Indiana Born Utilities Executive Came Abruptly on the Last Three Ballots; Virginia's Vote Gives Willkie 503 Votes, Two More Than Enough

By RICHARD L. TURNER

CONVENTION HALL, PHILADELPHIA, June 28 (Friday) — Wendell Willkie, the political miracle man, stampeded the Republican National Convention early today into a sixth vote nomination as its 1940 presidential candidate.

The Indiana born utilities executive, who has fought the New Deal up hill and down dale for years, surged into the convention with 105 votes on the first ballot, gained by big jumps on each succeeding roll call until the nomination was his.

Running third at the start to Thomas E. Dewey and Senator Robert A. Taft, he quickly passed both, and then he and Taft left Dewey so far to the rear that during the fifth ballot the New York district attorney withdrew and released his delegates.

It was a spectacular noisy crowd that watched Willkie reach the last rung of his brief and abrupt rise from a dark horse to convention stampeder and Republican nominee.

NOISY CROWD FOR WILLKIE

From the start it was for Willkie. It shouted for him, it yelled for him, stamped and applauded every time a single gain for its candidate was registered. Taft had his supporters in the galleries, too, but judging by the noise, they were badly outnumbered at all times.

The break to Willkie came abruptly on the last three ballots. Gov. Alf M. Landon, the 1936 nominee, announced that his Kansas delegation had swung solidly from Senator Capper to Willkie. On the same roll call Willkie bagged 75 New York votes, where he had had only a few of them before.

When the sixth call of the roll began the race had narrowed down to one between Willkie and Taft, and the latter got away to a lead. Sensing the moment it had been awaiting, the moment in which a possible future president of the United States was being made, the crowd leaned forward.

Its bursts of applause came in short, puffy, deafening shouts, as each state added to Willkie's total. Finally, Virginia's vote gave Willkie 503 votes — two more than enough. But such tallies are tricky things. Votes previously cast can be changed. The crowd literally sucked its breath.

PENNSYLVANIA CAST CLINCHING VOTES

But at that dramatic moment the announcement came that Pennsylvania which had previously "passed," had caucussed and was ready to cast its powerful bloc of 72 votes.

"Seventy-two votes for Wendell Willkie," its spokesman announced.

That clinched it, and the crowd went into a frenzy.

Gov. Bricker of Ohio, perspiring in the heat of the powerful photo and television lights which beamed down upon the delegates, strode to the platform with a motion that the nomination be made unanimous. He has been a principal supporter of Senator Taft.

That set the crowd to roaring its approval too, but Chairman Joseph W. Martin announced he could not recognize Bricker for that purpose until the roll call had been

New Deal Fight Helped Willkie Win Nomination

Was Basis for Meteoric Career in Republican Politics

PHILADELPHIA, June 28 (Friday) (AP)—Wendell Willkie's knock-down and drag-out battles with the New Deal's Tennessee Valley Authority furnished the basis for the meteoric career in Republican politics which won him the party's presidential nomination.

A utilities executive, lawyer and Indiana corn-and-hog farmer, Willkie has been a registered Republican but two years. He supported President Roosevelt and the Democratic ticket in 1932 and remained favorably disposed to the New Deal for some years thereafter.

Coming finally to fundamental differences with it, he expressed his criticism of the administration and his own approach to problems of governments in these two major points:

1. That such social and economic reforms as are necessary," including government regulation of business, should be accomplished by "laws expressly stating objectives and methods and not by commission "regulations."

2. That these reforms should be enforced by a government "friendly" to business.

New Deal Senator Unopposed; Schricker is Named for Governor

INDIANAPOLIS, June 27 (AP)—Indiana Democrats, whooping it up in a noisy state convention, today picked Lieut. Gov. Henry F Schricker their standard bearer for governor and renominated United States Senator Sherman Minton, strong New Dealer, without opposition.

They approved, though indirectly a third term for President Roosevelt while cheering their own candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination. Federal Security Administrator Paul V. McNutt, who keynoted the convention with a "Keep Out of War" speech.

Sherman Minton

The third-term endorsement came in an eleventh-hour resolution offered by National Committeeman Frank M. McHale, head of the McNutt - for - President campaign. The resolution reaffirmed confidence in the "statesmanship" patriotism and fidelity to the ideals of Democracy of the distinguished former governor (McNutt) of this state" and endorsed his (McNutt's) position in advocating the renomination of President Roosevelt."

The reference was to McNutt's Memorial Day statement calling upon Mr. Roosevelt to be a candidate for a third term because of the international crisis. The original report of the convention's resolutions committee had mentioned neither the third term question nor McNutt's candidacy.

Senator Minton was named a delegate-at-large along with McHale and six other McNutt adherents. They will have a half-vote each. In all, the Indiana delegation

State May Eliminate Property And Horsepower Taxes on Cars

Abolishment Would Discard System of Perforating Cards

BALTIMORE, June 27 (AP)—The governor's tax revision commission studying motor vehicle laws of other states with the view of eliminating property and horsepower taxes on motor vehicles, William L. Henderson, commission member, disclosed today.

Abolishment of these taxes would mean the discard of the system of perforating vehicle registration cards —which has caused trouble in Baltimore recently—and the elimination of assessments on vehicles.

As a substitute for the present taxes, Henderson said a new levy could be based, among other things, on the age and weight of vehicles. Such a proposal would centralize the collection of the tax in the hands of the commissioner of motor vehicles.

Henderson said the commission probably would make a report, with recommendations, on motor vehicles laws to the governor and legislative council this fall.

Nazis and British Bombers Swap Raid for Raid

Indication Is That Germans Are Feeling Effects of Air Attacks

BERLIN, June 27. (AP) — Germany and England exchanged raid for raid against each other's industrial and munitions centers as European eyes tonight turned speculatively toward the Balkans, where Rumania was reported to have submitted to a Russian ultimatum stripping it of Bessarabia and Northern Bucovina.

Nazis professed indifference to the Balkan developments and kept their emphasis on the main goal—England. As in the recent Russian troop movements into the Baltic states east and north of Prussia, German sources said the Reich was "disinterested" in the Russian-Rumanian affair.

It had long been predicted in European capitals that the Balkans and Russia ultimately would be involved in the current European war.

To Attack England

Attention of press and officialdom was directed toward the promised forthcoming attack on England. It was repeatedly emphasized that England will pay "five to one, 10 to 1, 1000 to 1" for injuries to Germany's population in what the high command described as Britain's random bombing of non-military objectives.

That Germans were beginning to feel the effect of Britain's air attacks was indicated in the rising clamor for "thousand-fold" retaliation. In one night, newspapers said, 371 bombs fell on German soil, exclusive of the hundreds dropped on Holland and other German-held territories.

Quick on the heels of the Franco-German armistice, German troops moved southward along the French coast, where the extensive coastal railway system expedited their movement, toward contact between the German army and the Spanish border. Thus the whole French Atlantic coast will be available for Germany in any contemplated action against England.

In the face of the German occupation, the British raided the German-held coastline the night of June 24-25, but the high command reported easy repulse of these "weak enemy naval forces."

Otherwise all was quiet of the western front.

Says Versailles Is Dead

Berlin newspapers called attention to the fact that tomorrow is the twenty-first anniversary of the signing of the Treaty of Versailles.

Hitler's Volkischer Boebachter commented that, with most of France occupied, the rest under German surveillance and England facing the German war machine alone, "Versailles is dead."

President Gives

$4,200,000,000 on the World War debt.

President Roosevelt issued his promulgation at the end of a busy day devoted entirely to defense and attendant problems.

Earlier, he had signed a $1,768,913,000 bill for emergency army and navy needs, conferred with members of his cabinet on his plan for western hemisphere economic solidarity, and gone over progress of the advisory defence commission's work.

Order Armored Cars

With approval of the emergency defense appropriation, the army placed orders for nearly 1,000 armored scout cars with a Cleveland motor manufacturer (The White Motor company). They are to cost $5,387,500. Contracts for sufficient cloth for 1,500,000 uniforms were divided among three score concerns.

The navy, meanwhile, was ready to give the starting signal for work on sixty-eight new warships to cost $750,000,000 as soon as the chief executive approved legislation to speed shipbuilding by setting aside the normal requirement of competitive bidding.

The scout cars armed with machine guns are designed to carry out some of the functions of horse cavalry before the days of mechnized warfare by scouting for information under fire.

The army also gave a $42,736 order to the Midvale company, Philadelphia, for gun tubes. Officials said it was the first substantial order given a manufacturer for such ordinance since the World War, as guns have been made in the last two decades only in army and navy arsenals.

Guard Communication Channels

A further defense development was an announcement from the communications commission that it was acquiring ten long-range direction-finder stations and would maintain twenty-four-hour surveillance of all communication channels.

The direction finder stations are used to determine the origin of suspicious messages.

Mussolini May Try To Emulate Julius Caesar

Italy's Men, Warships and Planes Might Direct Attack on England

ROME, June 27 (AP)—Facists hint that Mussolini's troops of the new Roman empire may try to invade England as Caesar did.

An authoritative source said tonight the employment of Italy's men, warships and planes in a direct attack on Britain, along with German forces, "is not to be excluded."

The Mediterranean will be Il Duce's main field of combat, and the tempo there was increasing today.

But Facists spoke of the symbolism of emulating Caesar's legions and actually setting foot again on the British Isles themselves.

Italians viewed with detachment the Soviet ultimatum to Rumania, demanding Bessarabia, another border region, and control of two ports.

Will not Aid Rumania

In spite of the fact that Italy once viewed with evident alarm any extension of Russian influence in southeastern Europe, foreign observers for a long time have concluded that Italy would do nothing to help Rumania.

As a matter of fact, Italians have shown sympathy for revisionist claims by Hungary and Bulgaria on Rumania.

Heavy new bombings of Malta, Britain's fortified island in the western Mediterranean, were reported by the high command.

"Intensive destructive action' by waves of planes which attacked "air and naval objectives" was anonunced.

(A dispatch from Valletta, Malta, however, said twenty-three persons were killed yesterday and many others wounded when the Italian planes in one of five attacks, dropped bombs in a working class section.)

Italians Bombard Salum

The Italian authorities also announced a warship bombardment of "considerable effect" on the British naval base of Salum, on the Egyptian coast near Italian Libya.

They reported repeated Italian air raids on British military objectives "in northern Africa" and minimized the effects of British air raids on Massawa and Assab, Italian East Africa.

From Cairo, the British military acknowledge that Italian troops and tanks had occupied a British frontier post between British Somailand and Ethiopia, after a four-hour fight. However, British patrols from Kenya colony were stated at Naiobi to have pushed twenty miles into Italian Somaliland without meeting resistance.

Drive To Elect Miss Lena Riggin Gains Impetus On Eastern Shore

SNOW HILL, MD., June 27 (AP)—A drive to elect Miss Lena H. Riggin, of Snow Hill, as Democratic national committeewoman from Maryland gained impetus today with the endorsement of her candidacy by ten Eastern shore political organizations and state officials.

Selection of the commiteewoman will be made by the state delegation to the National Democratic convention opening July 15 at Chicago.

Miss Riggin is president of the Worcester County Women's Democratic club, and secretary and treasurer of the United Democratic Woman's club of the Eastern shore. She has served since 1917, with the exception of a period between 1921-1923, as clerk to the Worcester county board of commissioners.

"I am heartily in favor of Miss Riggin's appointment as state Democratic national committeewoman," said State Comptroller J. Millard Tawes, of Crisfield adding that he would "be gad to propose her name for the position before Maryand's thirty - two delegates and alternates at the Chicago convention."

Proposed Private Army of Citizens Meets Opposition

Major General M. A. Reckord among Those Making Vigorous Protest

NORFOLK, Va., June 27. (AP)—Raymond J. Kelly, National commander of the American Legion, said tonight release of a story at Baltimore on the proposed organization of a private "army" under Legion auspices was "a breach of faith" and that publication was premature.

"The National Executive committee of the American Legion has not had time to consider the proposal," Kelly said. "Until the committee has considered it, I will have nothing to say."

BALTIMORE, June 27. (AP)—Proposed organization of a private "army" of citizens from eighteen years of age up under American Legion auspices to participate in the government's defense program was disclosed today when Maryland legionaires voiced objection to the plan.

The proposal, emanating from Legion headquarters and submitted to members of the national executive committee before announcement, already has been discussed by ranking Legion officials with government and army and navy leaders in Washington.

The national commander of the legion, at present Raymond J. Kelly of Detroit, would be commander-in-chief.

Legionaires would be officers of the "army" and thousands of citizens would be "recruited" for aid to the government in various capacities, including:

Support of army and navy defense plans and aiding popular education.

Promotion of recruiting in the services and civilian air groups.

Development of interest in military training, including formation of volunteer cadet corps.

Survey of strategic points and plan for their defense.

Aid in "blackout" tests and in functioning of the draft.

Acting through and in support of local civic agencies to control subversive activities; opposing organization of vigilantees or other "direct action" groups.

Disclosure of the plan brought vigorous protest from J. B. Hobbs, past commander of the Maryland department and now a national committeeman, and from Maj.-Gen. Milton A. Reckord, commander of the Maryland National Guard. Hobbs wired National Legion headquarters urging a delay in distribution of the plan "pending definite action by the national executive committee."

General Reckord, a past department commander for Maryland, asserted such a private "army" might readily turn into a dangerous "bund" organization and become a "menace."

Legion leaders planned to submit the proposal to post commanders about July 1.

The Kelly plan envisages a completely military organization, led and operated along regular army lines and following the army drill regulations.

The organization would not be armed under the plan, unless such arms were issued by federal or state authorities, but the outline suggested that surveys be made to determine where arms could be obtained in event of emergency.

Units would drill meanwhile without arms or other equipment except where local officers might decide to use primately-owned weapons.

Plan Is Outlined

Under the table of organization provided, strength of the various units would range from one company of fifty-nine men and two officers in communities up to 2,500 population to a battalion for each 25,000 population in cities of 50,000 population or over."

Strength of the battalions would be 472 men and twenty-two officers.

To form units, Legion post commanders were advised to call a public meeting of "patriotic citizens." If twenty-five or more enrolled, the post would secure authorization for the unit from national legion headquarters. Enrollees would elect their own officers.

A special Legion committee which drew up the "security" program met with army, navy and marine corps officers in Washington June 10 and was informed that:

"It would be impossible under present circumstances for the active overseership of such a home defense program to be undertaken by the federal defense establishment authorities and that the cooperation should be with the various state governments."

The committee noted that the "most helpful" of many conferences with federal officials in connection with the plan was one which Attorney General Robert Jackson and J. Edgar Hoover, director of the federal bureau of investigation.

Peace Rumors

papers as German air raiders were thundering along Britain's coasts in their seventh pre-dawn bombing expedition in ten days. Encountering stiff anti-aircraft fire and fighter plane opposition, the raiders dropped bombs at several points, doing undetermined damage.

Peace Talk Denied

The Conservative party's statement, which was issued on authority of Chamberlain himself, followed two days of rumors of a British-German peace move. One of these was broadcast by the German radio, and another originated in New York financial circles where it was reported Germany was making peace proposals. All had been authoritatively denied in London.

Previously opposition political circles have been urging Mr. Chamberlain's withdrawal from the government, where he is Lord President of the council, and some political circles reported the fear he might attempt to head a "surrender" cabinet should the Germans succeed in invading England.

The statement said:

"Rumors have lately gained currency in the United States of America that differences of opinion exist within the Cabinet and notably within the Conservative party. It has been suggested that the conservative party is not united and that a powerful section headed by Mr. Neville Chamberlain is prepared to come to terms with Adolf Hitler.

"These rumors, obviously inspired from fifth column sources, have today been categorically denied on the authority of Mr. Neville Chamberlain, lord president of the council.

"The conservative party has emphatically reaffirmed its whole-hearted resolve under its leader, Mr. Chamberlain, to stand behind the Prime Minister (Winston Churchill) and the government in their determination to win the war.

"There has never been a time when parliament and the nation were more united in their will to complete the task to which they have set their hand."

Contrary to talk of surrender, British leaders yesterday told their people the time would come when the order of the day would be changed from a defensive "hold fast" to an offensive "forward."

It seemed increasingly clear that important French fleet and field units were going to fight on at Engand's side, regardless of France's surrender in the forest of Compiegn.

The second promise from a member of the government that there would be an offensive as well as a defensive effort came from Minister of supply Herbert Morrison.

In a report to the House of Commons, which later held a secret session to consider his words, the minister declared:

"We have concentrated (thus far) quite properly on immediate production. But we are not going to forget the long view.

"We all hope that this period of the last few weeks will in due course change, and we must think of long-term policies and of offensive as well as defensive policies."

"Very big" orders for raw materials, he said, have been placed in the United States.

Neutral naval observers said Adolf Hitler "obviously" would mass submarine transports, fast torpedo boats and "mosquito" troop-carriers along the coast for a naval assault on England.

German Units Inspected

Indications that this was being done were given by the German radio as early as June 24 when it was announced that Grand Admiral Erich Raeder had inspected German naval units in Belgian, Dutch and French waters "to assure himself of the state of preparedness of these units against England."

French General Charles De Gaulle worked urgently in London with a growing staff to establish a French legion, and set up a French center for armament and research and a non-political French national committee to coordinate French policy.

He announced receipt of "definite information" that General Charles Catroux, the governor of French Indo-China who was said by the Bordeaux French government to have been recalled, would fight any invasion of that French possession.

De Gaulle said, too, that General August Nogues, the French commander-in-chief in northern Africa was taking "all necessary steps for organizing resistance."

Fleet Assembles in Africa

Important French fleet units, refusing to surrender as ordered, were reported to be assembling at North African ports to continue the fight under the command of the British navy.

Casablanca, in French Morocco, and Algiers, in North Africa on the Mediterranean, were concentration points.

Still other French war vessels apparently remained in the British-controlled port of Alexandria, Egypt.

In the home defense, neutral military observers declared that Britain's effort to put together a trained force of a million men to meet invasion was going forward satisfactorily.

This is the plan:

A first-line defensive force of 500,000, well-trained and reasonably well equipped.

A citizen-army of 500,000 for the second line.

A final reserve of local defense volunteer riflemen, organized mainly to combat parachute troops.

INTERPRETING THE WAR NEWS

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

Two inponderable factors in the the present European situation are casting shadows over the future for Germany and Italy even in their hour of victory over continental France.

Of most immediate consequence to France's forsaken ally, England is the indicated escape of the bulk of the French fleet from the Axis clutch. The fact that neither Rome nor Berlin has claimed its surrender, or interment, lends color to mounting indications that France's navy, and her colonies, are still in the fight.

If that proves to be the fact, it lessens to a definite degree the odds, against which Britain must fight for her life.

Soviet's Demands Timed

Even more distasteful, perhaps, to both Berlin and Rome is the certain fact that Russia has served notice that she proposes to satisfy her own imperial ambitions in her own way. Moscow's pistol-point demands on Rumania were timed to compel German-Italian acquiesence as well as Rumanian acceptance.

The last thing Germany wants is a war in the Balkans from which she draws heavily for food stocks and oil. Italy still is the "prisoner of the Mediterranean" despite the fall of continental France. Her whole attention must be devoted to her own affairs there, as Germany's must be to the Battle of Britain.

That accounts for Berlin's attitude of lack of interest in Russian maneuvering. It explains, too, the reported urgency of German and Italian diplomatic pressure on Rumanian to accept Moscow's terms.

War in the Balkans, particularly in Rumania, would gravely menace hopes of the Axis allies for a swift conclusion to their fight with Britain. If England can endure Nazi massed air attacks or repeal invasion for three months, her chances of turning the tables on her foes would be vastly improved. The arrival of winter, bringing inclement fogs about her shores, should bolster her chances of holding out until spring.

Eden Has Confidence

By that time, buttressed by her own and French overseas resources —and with those of the neutral world to call upon so long as the British navy holds the seas—British air power could be brought close to German-Italian strength. It is that moment to which Britain's war secretary, Anthony Eden, must have been looking forward in his forecast not only of successful British defense, but of ultimate British attack on her Axis foes.

Soviet Prisoners Warned Not To Smoke or Sing

MOSCOW, June 27. (AP) — The newspaper Red Star disclosed tonight that the recently appointed Defense Commissar Timoshenko had so tightened discipline in Red army guardhouses that prisoners are forbidden to listen to the radio, smoke, sing, play games or receive letters and packages.

Red Star thus commented:

". . . Those who violate discipline will be disgraced and subjected to a severe regimen. It is necessary in the interest of our army that it be merciless to all who think the laws are not written for them, who don't wish to renounce their petty bourgeois habits."

West Virginia Slayer Is Denied Clemency

CHARLESTON, W. VA., June 27. (AP)—Governor Holt said tonight he had denied clemency to Byzentine Hartman, the 28-year-old youth scheduled to be executed at 9 p. m. tomorrow for the slaying of a deputy sheriff.

Holt asserted "I have studied carefully the record of the case and the reports of medical and psychiatric examiners and find nothing that would seem to justify my interferring with the judgment of the court."

Roosevelt Will Ask Increase in Defense Fund

Decides To Urge Congress To Double Five Billion Already Voted

WASHINGTON, June 27 — (AP) — President Roosevelt, usually well-informed sources reported tonight, has decided to ask Congress to more than double the $5,000,000,000 already voted at this session of Congress for defense.

The chief executive and the national defense advisory commission were said to have approved a detailed proposal to make the additional billions availiable without delay to the army alone for planes, tanks and other weapons, expanded aircraft production, and a chain of munitions plants.

There appeared to be some prospect that the request might be ready for submission next week, in the interval between the congressional recesses for the national party conventions. Budgetary procedure, however, may delay it until after the Democratic convention.

Some members of Congress already have been consulted.

Exact amounts were not disclosed, but persons familiar with the details made it clear that larger additional sums—in direct appropriations and in contract authorizations—were involved than have been available thus far for all defense purposes combined.

The navy has served notice of intention to ask at least $175,000,000 additional for a start on the new $4,000,000,000 expansion of the fleet which the house has approved. Otherwise, administration defense advisers are understood to feel that the navy's requirements had been met for the time being.

Hungary Quivers

territorial revision from the German and Italian press.

A few months ago Hungarian statesmen were asserting their determination to stop a Soviet Russian advance into the Balkans. The Carpathians were declared a barricade against Communists, and Italian aid was envisaged in holding it.

Today, with the Soviet already on the Carpathian passes on Hungary's northern frontier by reason of the disappearance of Poland and Czecho-Slovakia, the Red army moved closer to that same curving barrier on the east.

Stalin chose an opportune moment to move in the Balkans to extend a pan-Slavic sway that has been an ambition of Russians from the days of the Tsars.

Germany is too busy in the west apparently to pay heed; Italy has joined her in the war and may not be in the mood to help Hungary carry out that proposed rush to the Carpathian barricade in Rumania.

"Disinterest" Expressed

Both in Berlin and Rome "disinterest" in the Rumanian situation was expressed, but informed opinion in the Balkans was that only because of the emergency in the west could Germany tolerate a situation which will leave Russia controlling Danube ports and otherwise dominating German economic interests in the Black Sea region.

In Belgrade, the Yugoslav cabinet met upon receipt of the Rumanian news. When Italy entered the war Yugoslav leaders announced they expected Russian help if Italy attempted an invasion of their soil.

The German radio, in a report from Belgrade, said there was no question of Yugoslavia observing her Balkan entente obligations with Rumania. These provided for assistance only in case of aggression by another Balkan power, not in the case of Soviet Russia, the radio pointed out.

"Should another Balkan or southeastern country intervene then a situation would arise which would induce Yugoslavia to re-examine the situation," said the broadcast.

Bulgaria was believed to be dependent upon her long-standing "little brother" relationship with Russia for support of her claims to Rumanian territory.

But she has been tremendously impressed by German victories in the west and has grown a bit less easy over her future relations with Russia—a fact which obviously has irritated the Soviet.

Should Russia's action give the big push to revisionism which has remained latent in this region for more than two decades, Hungary is expected first to present her claims in diplomatic fashion, seeking to win them bloodlessly as did Russia.

In the counties motorists can get their tags by paying automobile property taxes alone but in Baltimore city motorists must pay both municipal property taxes, in addition to automobile taxes, before they can get tags.

The tag licenses are uniform in scale throughout the state but automobile property taxes vary in the counties and Baltimore city. City motorists pay almost four times as much in automobile property taxes as some county motorists, Henderson pointed out.

Indication Is That Germans Are Feeling Effects of Air Attacks

BERLIN, June 27, (AP) — Germany and England exchanged raid for raid against each other's industrial and munitions centers as European eyes tonight turned speculatively toward the Balkans, where Rumania was reported to have submitted to a Russian ultimatum stripping it of Bessarabia and Northern Bucovina.

Nazis professed indifference to the Balkan developments and kept their emphasis on the main goal—England. As in the recent Russian troop movements into the Baltic states east and north of Prussia, German sources said the Reich was "disinterested" in the Russian-Rumanian affair.

It had long been predicted in European capitals that the Balkans and Russia ultimately would be involved in the current European war.

To Attack England

Attention of press and officialdom was directed toward the promised forthcoming attack on England. It was repeatedly emphasized that England will pay "five to one, 10 to 1, 1000 to 1" for injuries to Germany's population in what the high command described as Britain's random bombing of non-military objectives.

That Germans were beginning to feel the effect of Britain's air attacks was indicated in the rising clamor for "thousand-fold" retaliation. In one night, newspapers said, 371 bombs fell on German soil, exclusive of the hundreds dropped on Holland and other German-held territories.

Sixth ballot

Announced as unanimous for Willkie, after his nomination was assured with casting of the Virginia delegation's vote, and announcement that Pennsyvania had cast its 72 votes for Willkie.

CONVENTION HALL, Philadelphia, June 28.—(Friday)—Joseph W. Martin, chairman of the Republican National convention, told the delegates in the closing moments of the session that the following was the substance of a telephone conversation he had just had with Wendell Willkie, the nominee:

"He wants me to thank you for your loyalty and for your generosity in supporting him so enthusastically.

"He is grateful this verdict has come in a free convention where there has been deliberation such as no other party has ever had in political history.

"He wants me to tell you he is ready and willing and well-prepared to take up the fight to carry the principles of the Republican party to victory.

"He further wants me to ask you to give him your untiring support."

Martin Added:

"He will be a great leader, a tremendous fighter for the real principles of America but he needs the support of every delegate in this convention and every man and woman in America who believes in American principles."

Mussolini May Try To Emulate Julius Caesar

Italy's Men, Warships and Planes Might Direct Attack on England

ROME, June 27 (AP)—Facists hint that Mussolini's troops of the new Roman empire may try to invade England as Caesar did.

An authoritative source said tonight the employment of Italy's men, warships and planes in a direct attack on Britain, along with German forces, "is not to be excluded."

The Mediterranean will be Il Duce's main field of combat, and the tempo there was increasing today.

But Facists spoke of the symbolism of emulating Caesar's legions and actually setting foot again on the British Isles themselves.

Italians viewed with detachment the Soviet ultimatum to Rumania, demanding Bessarabia, another border region, and control of two ports.

Will not Aid Rumania

In spite of the fact that Italy once viewed with evident alarm any extension of Russian influence in southeastern Europe, foreign observers for a long time have concluded that Italy would do nothing to help Rumania.

As a matter of fact, Italians have shown sympathy for revisionist claims by Hungary and Bulgaria on Rumania.

Heavy new bombings of Malta, Britain's fortified island in the western Mediterranean, were reported by the high command.

"Intensive destructive action' by waves of planes which attacked "air and naval objectives" was anonuncced.

(A dispatch from Valletta, Malta, however, said twenty-three persons were killed yesterday and many others wounded when the Italian planes in one of five attacks, dropped bombs in a working class section.)

Italians Bombard Salum

The Italian authorities also announced a warship bombardment of "considerable effect" on the British naval base of Salum, on the Egyptian coast near Italian Libya.

They reported repeated Italian air raids on British military objectives "in northern Africa" and minimized the effects of British air raids on Massawa and Assab, Italian East Africa.

From Cairo, the British military acknowledge that Italian troops and tanks had occupied a British frontier post between British Somailand and Ethiopia, after a four-hour fight. However, British patrols from Kenya colony were stated at Naiobi to have pushed twenty miles into Italian Somaliland without meeting resistance.

Drive To Elect Miss Lena Riggin Gains Impetus On Eastern Shore

SNOW HILL, MD., June 27 (AP)—A drive to elect Miss Lena H. Riggin, of Snow Hill, as Democratic national committeewoman from Maryland gained impetus today with the endorsement of her candidacy by ten Eastern shore political organizations and state officials.

Selection of the commiteewoman will be made by the state delegation to the National Democratic convention opening July 15 at Chicago.

Miss Riggin is president of the Worcester County Women's Democratic club, and secretary and treasurer of the United Democratic Woman's club of the Eastern shore. She has served since 1917, with the exception of a period between 1921-1923, as clerk to the Worcester county board of commissioners.

"I am heartily in favor of Miss Riggin's appointment as state Democratic national committeewoman," said State Comptroller J. Millard Tawes, of Crisfield adding that he would "be gad to propose her name for the position before Maryand's thirty - two delegates and alternates at the Chicago convention."

Proposed Private Army of Citizens Meets Opposition

Major General M. A. Reckord among Those Making Vigorous Protest

NORFOLK, Va., June 27. (AP) —Raymond J. Kelly, National commander of the American Legion, said tonight release of a story at Baltimore on the proposed organization of a private "army" under Legion auspices was "a breach of faith" and that publication was premature.

"The National Executive committee of the American Legion has not had time to consider the proposal," Kelly said. "Until the committee has considered it, I will have nothing to say."

BALTIMORE, June 27. (AP)—Proposed organization of a private "army" of citizens from eighteen years of age up under American Legion auspices to participate in the government's defense program was disclosed today when Maryland legionaires voiced objection to the plan.

The proposal, emanating from Legion headquarters and submitted to members of the national executive committee before announcement, already has been discussed by ranking Legion officials with government and army and navy leaders in Washington.

The national commander of the legion, at present Raymond J. Kelly of Detroit, would be commander-in-chief.

Legionaires would be officers of the "army" and thousands of citizens would be "recruited" for aid to the government in various capacities, including:

Support of army and navy defense plans and aiding popular education.

Promotion of recruiting in the services and civilian air groups.

Development of interest in military training, including formation of volunteer cadet corps.

Survey of strategic points and plan for their defense.

Aid in "blackout" tests and in functioning of the draft.

Acting through and in support of local civic agencies to control subversive activities; opposing organization of vigilantees or other "direct action" groups.

Disclosure of the plan brought vigorous protest from J. B. Hobbs, past commander of the Maryland department and now a national committeeman, and from Maj.-Gen. Milton A. Reckord, commander of the Maryland National Guard. Hobbs wired National Legion headquarters urging a delay in distribution of the plan "pending definite action by the national executive committee."

General Reckord, a past department commander for Maryland, asserted such a private "army" might readily turn into a dangerous "bund" organization and become a "menace."

Legion leaders planned to submit the proposal to post commanders about July 1.

The Kelly plan envisages a completely military organization, led and operated along regular army lines and following the army drill regulations.

The organization would not be armed under the plan, unless such arms were issued by federal or state authorities, but the outline suggested that surveys be made to determine where arms could be obtained in event of emergency.

Units would drill meanwhile without arms or other equipment except where local officers might decide to use primately-owned weapons.

Plan Is Outlined

Under the table of organization provided, strength of the various units would range from one company of fifty-nine men and two officers in communities up to 2,500 population to a battalion for each 25,000 population in cities of 50,000 population or over."

Strength of the battalions would be 472 men and twenty-two officers.

To form units, Legion post commanders were advised to call a public meeting of "patriotic citizens." If twenty-five or more enrolled, the post would secure authorization for the unit from national legion headquarters. Enrollees would elect their own officers.

A special Legion committee which drew up the "security" program met with army, navy and marine corps officers in Washington June 10 and was informed that:

"It would be impossible under present circumstances for the active overseership of such a home defense program to be undertaken by the federal defense establishment authorities and that the cooperation should be with the various state governments."

The committee noted that the "most helpful" of many conferences with federal officials in connection with the plan was one which Attorney General Robert Jackson and J. Edgar Hoover, director of the federal bureau of investigation.

Resignation Demanded

LONDON, June 28 (Friday) (AP)—Resignation of Rumanian foreign minister Ion Gigirtu in the crisis precipitated by Russian territorial demands was reported today in a Bucharest dispatch of Reuters, British News agency. Constantine Argetoianu, president of the Senate, is replacing Gigurtu, the dispatch said.

THEY'RE FOR THOMAS E. DEWEY

All of Thomas E. Dewey's followers and supporting delegates rose and paraded around the floor of Convention hall, Philadelphia, after the district attorney had been nominated by John Lord O'Brien, of Buffalo, N. Y. The woman in the foreground enthusiastically shouts her approval.

Peace Rumors

papers as German air raiders were thundering along Britain's coasts in their seventh pre-dawn bombing expedition in ten days. Encountering stiff anti-aircraft fire and fighter plane opposition, the raiders dropped bombs at several points, doing undetermined damage.

Peace Talk Denied

The Conservative party's statement, which was issued on authority of Chamberlain himself, followed two days of rumors of a British-German peace move. One of these was broadcast by the German radio, and another originated in New York financial circles where it was reported Germany was making peace proposals. All had been authoritatively denied in London.

Previously opposition political circles have been urging Mr. Chamberlain's withdrawal from the government, where he is Lord President of the council, and some political circles reported the fear he might attempt to head a "surrender" cabinet should the Germans succeed in invading England.

The statement said:

"Rumors have lately gained currency in the United States of America that differences of opinion exist within the Cabinet and notably within the Conservative party. It has been suggested that the conservative party is not united and that a powerful section headed by Mr. Neville Chamberlain is prepared to come to terms with Adolf Hitler.

"These rumors, obviously inspired from fifth column sources, have today been categorically denied on the authority of Mr. Neville Chamberlain, lord president of the council.

"The conservative party has emphatically reaffirmed its whole-hearted resolve under its leader, Mr. Chamberlain, to stand behind the Prime Minister (Winston Churchill) and the government in their determination to win the war.

"There has never been a time when parliament and the nation were more united in their will to complete the task to which they have set their hand."

Contrary to talk of surrender, British leaders yesterday told their people the time would come when the order of the day would be changed from a defensive "hold fast" to an offensive "forward."

It seemed increasingly clear that important French fleet and field units were going to fight on at Engand's side, regardless of France's surrender in the forest of Compiegn.

The second promise from a member of the government that there would be an offensive as well as a defensive effort came from Minister of supply Herbert Morrison.

In a report to the House of Commons, which later held a secret session to consider his words, the minister declared:

"We have concentrated (thus far) quite properly on immediate production. But we are not going to forget the long view.

"We all hope that this period of the last few weeks will in due course change, and we must think of long-term policies and of offensive as well as defensive policies."

"Very big" orders for raw materials, he said, have been placed in the United States.

Neutral naval observers said Adolf Hitler "obviously" would mass submarine transports, fast torpedo boats and "mosquito" troop-carriers along the coast for a naval assault on England.

German Units Inspected

Indications that this was being done were given by the German radio as early as June 24 when it was announced that Grand Admiral Erich Raeder had inspected German naval units in Belgian, Dutch and French waters "to assure himself of the state of preparedness of these units against England."

French General Charles De Gaulle worked urgently in London with a growing staff to establish a French legion, and set up a French center for armament and research and a non-political French national committee to coordinate French policy.

He announced receipt of "definite information" that General Charles Catroux, the governor of French Indo-China who was said by the Bordeaux French government to have been recalled, would fight any invasion of that French possession.

De Gaulle said, too, that General August Nogues, the French commander-in-chief in northern Africa was taking "all necessary steps for organizing resistance."

Fleet Assembles in Africa

Important French fleet units, refusing to surrender as ordered, were reported to be assembling at North African ports to continue the fight under the command of the British navy.

Casablanca, in French Morocco, and Algiers, in North Africa on the Mediterranean, were concentration points.

Still other French war vessels apparently remained in the British-controlled port of Alexandria, Egypt.

In the home defense, neutral military observers declared that Britain's effort to put together a trained force of a million men to meet invasion was going forward satisfactorily.

This is the plan:

A first-line defensive force of 500,000, well-trained and reasonably well equipped.

A citizen-army of 500,000 for the second line.

INTERPRETING THE WAR NEWS

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

Two inponderable factors in the the present European situation are casting shadows over the future for Germany and Italy even in their hour of victory over continental France.

Of most immediate consequence to France's forsaken ally, England is the indicated escape of the bulk of the French fleet from the Axis clutch. The fact that neither Rome nor Berlin has claimed its surrender, or interment, lends color to mounting indications that France's navy, and her colonies, are still in the fight.

If that proves to be the fact, it lessens to a definite degree the odds, against which Britain must fight for her life.

Soviet's Demands Timed

Even more distasteful, perhaps, to both Berlin and Rome is the certain fact that Russia has served notice that she proposes to satisfy her own imperial ambitions in her own way. Moscow's pistol-point demands on Rumania were timed to compel German-Italian acquiesence as well as Rumanian acceptance.

The last thing Germany wants is a war in the Balkans from which she draws heavily for food stocks and oil. Italy still is the "prisoner of the Mediterranean" despite the fall of continental France. Her whole attention must be devoted to her own affairs there, as Germany's must be to the Battle of Britain.

That accounts for Berlin's attitude of lack of interest in Russian maneuvering. It explains, too, the reported urgency of German and Italian diplomatic pressure on Rumanian to accept Moscow's terms.

War in the Balkans, particularly in Rumania, would gravely menace hopes of the Axis allies for a swift conclusion to their fight with Britain. If England can endure Nazi massed air attacks or repeal invasion for three months, her chances of turning the tables on her foes would be vastly improved. The arrival of winter, bringing inclement fogs about her shores, should bolster her chances of holding out until spring.

Eden Has Confidence

By that time, buttressed by her own and French overseas resources —and with those of the neutral world to call upon so long as the British navy holds the seas—British air power could be brought close to German-Italian strength. It is that moment to which Britain's war secretary, Anthony Eden, must have been looking forward in his forecast not only of successful British defense, but of ultimate British attack on her Axis foes.

Soviet Prisoners Warned Not To Smoke or Sing

MOSCOW, June 27, (AP) — The newspaper Red Star disclosed tonight that the recently appointed Defense Commissar Timoshenko had so tightened discipline in Red army guardhouses that prisoners are forbidden to listen to the radio, smoke, sing, play games or receive letters and packages.

Red Star thus commented:

". . . Those who violate discipline will be disgraced and subjected to a severe regimen. It is necessary in the interest of our army that it be merciless to all who think the laws are not written for them, who don't wish to renounce their petty bourgeois habits."

West Virginia Slayer Is Denied Clemency

CHARLESTON, W. VA., June 27, (AP)—Governor Holt said tonight he had denied clemency to Byzentine Hartman, the 28-year-old youth scheduled to be executed at 9 p. m. tomorrow for the slaying of a deputy sheriff.

Holt asserted "I have studied carefully the record of the case and the reports of medical and psychiatric examiners and find nothing that would seem to justify my interferring with the judgment of the court."

will have twenty-eight votes (uninstructed) in the Chicago convention. McNutt refused to take a place on the delegation, giving rise to reports that he still considered himself a presidential or vice-presidential possibility.

Deal he goes into battle, as he terms it, with his "dukes up."

His life has been one of action.

Born forty-eight years ago at Elwood, Indiana, he worked at a variety of jobs in his youth and while going to school. Later he practiced law and served in the army.

Today he is president of Commonwealth and Southern, $1,200,000,000 utilities firm that operates companies in the South, Michigan and the Midwest. He spends vacations at his 1,500-acre corn-hog farm near Rushville, Indiana.

Willkie's parents both were practicing lawyers. His mother was the first woman admitted to the Indiana bar.

Willkie had an average, rough-and-tumble, small town boyhood, growing up with two sisters and three brothers in a three-story maple-shaded frame house and in a yard overrun with cows, chickens, horses, dogs, cats and children.

Roosevelt Will Ask Increase in Defense Fund

Decides To Urge Congress To Double Five Billion Already Voted

WASHINGTON, June 27 — (AP) — President Roosevelt, usually well-informed sources reported tonight, has decided to ask Congress to more than double the $5,000,000,000 already voted at this session of Congress for defense.

The chief executive and the national defense advisory commission were said to have approved a detailed proposal to make the additional billions availiable without delay to the army alone for planes, tanks and other weapons, expand aircraft production, and a chain of munitions plants.

There appeared to be some prospect that the request might be ready for submission next week, in the interval between the congressional recesses for the national party conventions. Budgetary procedure, however, may delay it until after the Democratic convention.

Some members of Congress already have been consulted.

Exact amounts were not disclosed, but persons familiar with the details made it clear that larger additional sums—in direct appropriations and in contract authorizations—were involved than have been available thus far for all defense purposes combined.

The navy has served notice of intention to ask at least $175,000,000 additional for a start on the new $4,000,000,000 expansion of the fleet which the house has approved. Otherwise, administration defense advisers are understood to feel that the navy's requirements had been met for the time being.

Hungary Quivers

territorial revision from the German and Italian press.

A few months ago Hungarian statesmen were asserting their determination to stop a Soviet Russian advance into the Balkans. The Carpathians were declared the barricade against Communists, and Italian aid was envisaged in holding it.

Today, with the Soviet already at the Carpathian passes on Hungary's northern frontier by reason of the disappearance of Poland and Czecho-Slovakia, the Red army moved closer to that same eurving barrier on the east.

Stalin chose an opportune moment to move in the Balkans to extend a pan-Slavic sway that has been an ambition of Russians from the days of the Tsars.

Germany is too busy in the west apparently to pay heed; Italy has joined her in the war and may not be in the mood to help Hungary carry out that proposed rush to the Carpathian barricade in Rumania.

"Disinterest" Expressed

Both in Berlin and Rome "disinterest" in the Rumanian situation was expressed, but informed opinion in the Balkans was that only because of the emergency in the west could Germany tolerate a situation which will leave Russia controlling Danube ports and otherwise dominating German economic interests in the Black Sea region.

In Belgrade, the Yugoslav cabinet met upon receipt of the Rumanian news. When Italy entered the war Yugoslav leaders announced they expected Russian help if Italy attempted an invasion of their soil.

The German radio, in a report from Belgrade, said there was no question of Yugoslavia observing her Balkan entente obligations with Rumania. These provided for assistance only in case of aggression by another Balkan power, not in the case of Soviet Russia, the radio pointed out.

"Should another Balkan or southeastern country intervene then the situation would arise which would induce Yugoslavia to re-examine the situation," said the broadcast.

Bulgaria was believed to be still dependent upon her long-standing "little brother" relationship with Russia for support of her claims to Rumanian territory.

But she has been tremendously impressed by German victories in the west and has grown a bit too easy over her future relations with Russia—a fact which obviously has irritated the Soviet.

Should Russia's action give the big push to revisionism which has remained latent in this region for more than two decades, Hungary is expected first to present her claims in diplomatic fashion, seeking to win them bloodlessly as did Russia.

the horsepower of their vehicle as automobile porsonal property tax.

In the counties motorists can get their tags by paying automobile property taxes alone but in Baltimore city motorists must pay the municipal property taxes, in addition to automobile taxes, before they can get tags.

The tag licenses are uniform in scale throughout the state but automobile property taxes vary in the counties and Baltimore city. City motorists pay almost four times as much in automobile property taxes as some county motorists, Henderson pointed out.

A Strong and Appealing Platform Is Evolved

BY REASON of rapidly changing conditions in a war-torn world, it is exceedingly difficult to lay down a practical working formula for the guidance of an American political party. Such definitions and declarations as it contains must necessarily be subjected to the possibilities of unseen eventualities, which might upset any program and to fathom which is beyond the ken of the human mind. Consequently such declarations must be broad enough in scope to allow for unknown contingencies and yet sufficiently specific to embody a sane, practical and yet courageous course of action as present conditions and foresight warrant.

In view of such considerations, this newspaper believes the Republican platform builders at Philadelphia have succeeded admirably in drafting a strong and appealing party platform. It has the distinct advantage of brevity, as compared with former like documents, for one thing, which definitely represents a general political philosophy and a course of national procedure that, if carried out, will bring the country out of the awful muddle in which it has been deplorably weltering. That very brevity has produced an emphasis and a forthrightness that can cope with any criticism of evasiveness or ambiguity.

The paramount subject of war has been set forth in a clear light and in what appears to be not only the wish of the majority but also the safe, sane, logical, obvious and right course. The party is firmly opposed to involvement in foreign war. That is plain horse sense in view of our utter unpreparedness. But it stands as firmly for a "prompt, orderly and realistic" building of our national defense to the point of defending ourselves and our liberties, and upholding the Monroe doctrine which in itself represents an important measure of that defense.

At the same time, no door is closed to extension of aid to all peoples fighting for liberty, or whose liberty is threatened, such as may be possible within the law and not inconsistent with our own defense needs. Particularly forceful is the denunciation of "explosive utterances" by our executive and such acts and proceedings that might lead to war without congressional authorization. The latter is a subject on which the Congress has been amply advised and has heeded in its abandonment of the plan to adjourn.

The New Deal failures are catalogued in telling fashion but in each instance there is the offering of a well-studied improvement or substitute designed to remedy or offset the failures listed. As a constructive document, it is superb.

The plank on labor is brief but to the point. Experience has shown beyond all cavil that improvement of the National Labor Relations act is imperative. The plank on agriculture is unusually strong, pointing the way to a resumption of productiveness under private control along with sensible conservation measures as against bureaucratic bossism and enforced scarcity. The plank on government and business is succinct and typifies a fundamental point of the Republican philosophy, which is that private enterprise must be encouraged within a minimum of governmental regulation to the end that production can be increased and not restricted. The national need makes that as imperative as it is obvious.

There will be ample time in which to discuss the other planks, as well as these mentioned, but a first reading shows that the various subjects have had the benefit of serious thought and in each instance they have epitomized the needs involved in a sound, clear, forthright, and appealing manner. In brief, the Republicans have done well with the difficult task of erecting a platform and it should serve as a great beacon light to guide the country out of the shoals, away from the raging tempests and into a safe haven.

Mass-Production Of Airplanes

SKEPTICISM in the aircraft industry as to possibilities for mass-production of airplanes probably arises from lack of knowledge of the refinements developed in recent years in the manufacture of automobiles.

The Liberty airplane engine produced by the United States automobile industry during the World war never won much acclaim. Perhaps the memory of those days have something to do with the present attitude of aircraft manufacturers toward quantity production. But that was twenty years ago and in the meantime the methods and quality of automobile manufacture have changed as much as the superficial appearance of the vehicles.

In making the mass-produced and interchangeable parts of the modern automobile engine, machines now work to minute tolerances. The honing of bearings is done by machines which reject an error of one-millionth of an inch, an accuracy which the handicraft methods still employed in most aircraft manufacturing can not even rival.

If aircraft manufacturing is "backward" in such matters, it is not the fault of the technicians, but of lack of opportunity to develop quantity methods. Manufacture has been largely experimental. Models have changed, not yearly but continually. The market would not permit quantity output of any one model, even if the keen technical competition had permitted it.

The big difficulty the layman has foreseen in mass-producing aircraft is in the building of wings and fuselages, involving the use of millions of tiny hand-set rivets. But Henry Ford says this can be overcome by substituting welding and brazing, which, if true, certainly would save time.

A greater obstacle may prove finally to be the conservatism of present aircraft manufacturers, who well might resent the invasion of their field by mass-producing competitors. Their co-operation is indispensable, however, and their patriotism will not be found wanting.

Determined upon Security

IT was by unanimous vote that the House of Representatives passed the Vinson bill authorizing the building of a two-ocean navy for the United States, thereby serving notice more effectively than anything else that has been done that the United States means business when it says that European aggressions will not be tolerated in the Western Hemisphere.

Here is one cold fact that the dictators must take into account—complete unanimity on a naval defense superior to anything the world has yet seen. Because of the unanimous vote in the House, Senate approval of the measure when it considers it is a foregone conclusion.

One factor that has promoted the two-ocean navy is the French defeat. Another is the knowledge that Japan is building super-battleships, for what purpose is not hard to surmise. The United States now is in the position of being forced to protect itself against any combination of enemies, either in the Pacific or in the Atlantic, or both.

This tremendous sea power has been forced upon the United States against its will and desire, and only those governments scheming to violate the territory of the Western Hemisphere have cause for alarm. For them, the authorization of 200 modern warships at a cost estimated at $4,000,000,000 should recommend a second thought.

At any time, if conditions warrant, the Washington government may suspend plans for naval construction. If the British and what has been salvaged of the French fleet can continue to control the seas, a portion of the program can be held in abeyance.

But, one way or another, the United States is determined upon security from the aggressions which have made Europe a scrap heap.

Another Highway Safety Gadget

NEW SAFETY GADGETS continue to be developed. Among the latest is a neon-lighted traffic line, consisting of neon tubing placed under a red transparent covering of plastic material imbedded in the pavement. The units of light, thirty to sixty inches in length, are said to be clearly visible through heavy fog, rain and the glare of oncoming headlights.

The line lights are being tried out in Little Rock, Ark., and have proved so satisfactory that test installations are to be made along the Arkansas state highways. It is planned to place the units in a continuous line on curves and hills, and at intervals of fifty feet on straight, level stretches. Whether such an elaborate use would be as utilitarian as the reflector systems or within reasonable financial upkeep reach remains to be disclosed.

At real danger points, however, it would appear that this new device would be most helpful and an added safeguard against accidents, for which the growing casualty record indicates a need.

"The people of America," advises the Kansas City Star, "now have a supreme opportunity to learn what it means to keep their feet on the ground." And their shirts where their shirts ought to be.

It appears that the move to add another month to the year has been temporarily abandoned, or until it can be learned how Hitler is going to come out with his endeavor to turn the year into one long night.

You can always identify the nations that are free countries, says the man at the next desk. They are those whose citizens complain more than they suffer.

The Opposite of "Moocher"

By MARSHALL MASLIN

Nobody likes moochers—and why should we? They are people who haven't heard about the doctrine of Give and Take, or have decided that only half of it fits them. They take but they don't give. And they figure that this puts them just that much ahead of the poor idiots who don't play the game that way.

Marshall Maslin

A mooch, will ask you for a cigarette when he has a full pack of his own. He'll borrow a dollar and put it in his savings account. (That isn't just fancy: I knew a man who used to borrow from friends—fifty cents at a time—and run away to the bank with it.) . . . He'll borrow your car and bring it back with the gas tank empty. . . . He has heard somewhere that it is more blessed to give than to receive and he is generously willing for you to have your full share of the blessings of this life. . . . I don't like moochers. You don't, either. Sometimes I think that even the moocher doesn't really like himself. . . . Let's not talk about him any more. He's an unpleasant subject and probably incorrigible.

But there are also some very fine human beings who are the exact opposite of the mooch and they aren't perfect, either.

They know about giving and taking, too, but they concentrate on the giving and decline to take. . . . They are stiffnecked and proud and will accept nothing. Their slogan is: "I hate to be under obligations to anybody!"

And if they ever do accept anything from a friend, they pay him back so swiftly that it isn't funny. They are so prompt that they sometimes hurt their friends' feelings. Because a true friend LIKES to do something for you. He WANTS to feel that he is helpful, that you and he share obligations and gladly give and graciously receive.

The moocher wrecks every friendship on the shoals of his selfishness. But the man who hates to be under obligations also spoils a few friendships. Every human being should know how to give easily, but there should also be a technique about receiving. (It comes naturally to some; I don't have any trouble.) It should be acquired by everybody. . . . But don't go into it too intensely because the line between generous receiving and miserable mooching is a narrow one—and easy to step over.

Willkie Is Seen As "White Hope" Of Republicans

By HUGH S. JOHNSON

Hugh Johnson

PHILADELPHIA, June 27. — All Republicans know that nothing short of some kind of blitzkreig can bring home their bacon. They have tried several sorts. Governor Stassen made a speech which reads well. It just didn't click. Neither did Joe Martin's. Finally, the broadcasting companies sacrificed about $55,000 worth of commercial time because Mr. Hoover wanted two hours on the air. Probably, looking back at Cleveland, this was intended to provide for about thirty minutes of applause—I am always tempted to confuse that word with "applesauce." They look, and are, so much alike. However you spell it, it didn't come. The merry-go-round broke down.

The 1936 Cleveland cry "We want H-o-over" was repeated in a staged demonstration at his hotel before he embarked for the great adventure but, at the convention, the nearest I heard to that was a drunk in a corner apparently aiming at "We Want Hoover". The nearest he could mumble sounded to me something like, "Hoo wants Weever?" The swan song of the Great Engineer dug his grave with his teeth, or at least with his vocal organs. It was pathetic because nobody denies that Mr. Hoover is an abused baby, a very able leader who somehow got the short end of the stick in every break since 1929.

Spark Plug Needed

What the Republicans need is a spark-plug. They have thus far tried out everything in the old garage. Stassen-Martin-Hoover. No soap! So far as inspiration and zip are concerned this convention to date looks more like the annual get-together of the Amalgamated Order of Morticians, Undertakers and Embalmers, than a conclave of a great party at a critical period in our history.

What's the trouble? I'm just an amateur, but to me it seems very plain. For the Republicans this situation needs a landslider—an architect of avalanches. The whole town boils with the knowledge that he is right here—being bottled up—or attempted to be bottled up—by all the old mechanical tricks in the outdated Republican professional political bag. It is like trying to suppress a cyclone with a palm leaf fan.

Would "Go to Town"

If Wendell Willkie with no start, no organization, no political pap, patronage or pull can blitzkrieg a hand-picked, hand-packed Republican Convention as he is doing to this one, what would he do to the country if they took off his wraps and let him run? Everybody seems to realize what he would do. He would go to town. He is the only Republican who could.

The worst thing that could happen to him has happened, the Morgan crowd has appeared with Willkie buttons. Taft headquarters is broadcasting that, but not mentioning that the simple senator has the support of Joe Pew. Mr. Pew is one of the most sincere and able of Americans, but he is a forthwright clock-turner-back. In the world of today he is an echo of the past and his support is politically as poisonous as the Liberty League's.

The Kill of Death

He and Joe Grundy haunt these halls like Count Dracula — the "dead-undead"—and theirs is the kiss of death. Morgan support of Willkie is something of the same nature, but his whole record shows that he is his own man whom Wall Street follows toward the new light—and not the reverse. His campaign, if nominated, would make that plain beyond peradventure.

Everything that has happened here shows that Mr. Willkie is the one Republican white hope, a spontaneous and explosive popular choice. His woeful weakness is that he has only amateur political guidance. No practical politician is rounding up the dogie delegates. Mr. Willkie won't make any promises. That would be an asset in a campaign, but in the back-room horse-trading of this convention it is tragic. Yet, all signs still point to his nomination, regardless of precedent. Abroad and at home, 1940 is truly the year of miracles.—Distributed by United Syndicate, Inc.

AND IT WILL BE THEIR FAULT IF THEY CAN'T HATCH 'EM

Unseen Contingencies Handicap GOP Platform Text, Mark Sullivan Says

By MARK SULLIVAN

PHILADELPHIA, June 27—About war and foreign relations, the Republicans tried to define the undefineable. Literally that. They tried to write a platform plank which would stand up in a hundred future contingencies — all unknown, all arising out of the unpredictable spasms of a world in convulsion.

Mark Sullivan

On war and foreign relations, there was never but one good line for the Republican platform. Ex-President Hoover saw it when in his address he said.

> "In a few days, this convention will have chosen our national leader (that is, nominee for president). The president (Mr. Roosevelt) will be able to secure from him the views of our party upon these transcendant questions".

Remarkable Declaration

That was a remarkable declaration of Mr. Hoover. Hardly anything like it ever occurred before. In effect Mr. Hoover was saying that from day to day events in Europe will take turns—and darts and dashes and plunges—which no one can foresee; that these sudden developments will concern the United States; that in the face of them our government will have to take steps of one kind or another; that no one can know in advance what the appropriate step would be in each unforeseeable case; and that if President Roosevelt, as he acts on each occasion, would like to have the views of the opposition party, he should consult the as yet unknown Republican presidential nominee.

That suggestion of Mr. Hoover was extraordinary—but we live in a time when only the extraordinary is realistic.

If the spirit of that suggestion —which is the only practicable thing to do under the circumstances —had been written into the Republican platform, the plank on war and foreign relations might read somewhat as follows:

Unfathomable Subject

"We the Republican party are asking the country to elect us to power next November, and install us in power next January. We are asking for the job of managing the United States for a period of four years. During that four years, and also between now and January, there will occur in Europe and elsewhere events which will affect the United States, and which will call on the United States for appropriate actions.

"Under these conditions we refuse to foist upon the public the pretense that we, here in Philadelphia, in June, 1940, can write a statement of policy about war and foreign relations which will adequately provide for each and every emergency and condition which may arise during four years until 1944.

"We therefore say simply: that if entrusted with power we will meet each situation as it arises; that we will treat each situation with the best intelligence we possess, taking into account the conditions at the time; and that in each situation we will act in accord with the best interests of the United States."

Simple Candor and Truth

No doubt a political party would fear to write such a plank. They might fear it would lay them open to jeering charges of "evasion". But in fact such a declaration would be simple candor and truth. Precisely that program, or that lack of program, is the course that will be followed, regardless of what party is in power, or what individual is the next president.

This is a serious-minded convention, the personnel of delegates exceptionally conscious of responsibility. One wished them well, and know they would do their best. Yet repeatedly you were conscious of how much events are beyond their power.

War Influences Felt

You left a session of the convention, and got back to the hotel late. You picked up a midnight issue of the following morning's Philadelphia Inquirer. In in you read, in a headline equalling that of the convention, something about Europe, the future of the French navy. And you felt the future of the French fleet might have, in some distant development, consequences to America as great as anything this convention can write into a platform.

Yet one got assurance from the high level of things down here. The elevation of Ex-President Hoover's speech, regardless of agreement or disagreement about details of it; and the sense of character and dependability in Mr. Hoover's personality as he stood before the convention, all suggested a passage from Marvell's oration ode on Cromwell

> He nothing common did, nor mean,
> Upon that memorable scene.

Why Money Rates Are Low

From the Johnstown, Pa., Democrat

Money rates are low. Ask a banker why and he will reply that rates are low because there is more money available for investment than there are places to invest it. Perhaps. And yet who is there who doesn't need more money—more money in his business, in his manner of living, more money generally? There can be no lack of opportunities to invest. The factor lacking is security. As war sperads over the earth, secure investments grow less and less for "no man wants to build a house the day before an earthquake or plant trees before a forest fire."

Wealth which should mean money is being burned up, blown up and cast into unproductive forms. Wealth in the form of properties and commodities is being destroyed on a scale never before paralleled in the history of the world. Perhaps as the days go by the demand for money, real money, will slowly gather momentum. Great wars are usually followed by famine and pestilence which increase the need for money but decrease security.

However, the probabilities are that the bankers, if they were telling all of the truth, would point out that one reason money rates are low is because money has been cheapened. Cheap money naturally produces low interest rates. When the gold content of the American dollar was increased, 100 cents were transformed into 59 cents. We are supposed to have some 18,000,000,000 gold dollars buried somewhere. On the basis of pre-Roosevelt standards, these $18,000,000,000 are worth about $10,000,000,000. And so, the probabilities are interest rates are low because money has been cheapened.

NAMED TO RUN U. S. ISLANDS

By EDWIN C. HILL

Edwin C. Hill

The homespun politician still has his place, in the scheme of things. Over in Philadelphia the other day I saw George Ade's county chairman going through the hotel lobby. We had already spotted a pair of congress gaiters from Arkansas, but we didn't know there was a linen duster left anywhere in the country. But the county chairman wore one, and with his iron-rimmed spectacles, varnished straw hat, shrewd eyes and nimbus of white hair, he could have walked on in that memorable role. He was having the time of his life.

In neccessarily brief and swift inspections, we haven't as yet seen a celluloid collar. We have chalked up eleven bandanna handkerchiefs, two palm leaf fans, eleven big wads of Missouri twist chewing tobacco carried in the hip pocket, three alpaca suits, and two tooth brushes worn in the vest pocket. There is quite a scattering of red suspenders. There is also prevalent the traditional convention brand of stogies, and stem-winding watches have been visible. One had a hunting case with a stag on it. It made me homesick.

Schoolbook Rhyme

An early-day schoolbook rhyme kept coming back to me:

> When Washington was president
> As cold as any icicle,
> He never on a railroad went,
> And never rode a bicycle.

It was perhaps this bit of nostalgic doggerel which kept me alert to signs of the homesun American genus politico, as above. But I am coming to my story from the wrong way. The point is that the above citations are exceptions and therefore news—at least human news if not hot news. These delegates from the forty-eight still sovereign commonwealths are, with few exceptions, smartly tailored men, with a big-town look about them, even if they came from a whistling post. In the sense that we used to know them, and sometimes lampoon them, there are no more rustics. A friend indicated to a snappily dressed man who looked like he had just stepped out of a New York club. He is from a small town in the Ozark Mountains.

Are Passing

One dressed-up delegate, with whom I conversed, talked like a hillbilly. One gentleman of somewhat bucolic appearance, was identified as a brilliant professor at one of the great Eastern universities. But, on the whole, most of the regional and urban or rural tags are passing. One can't help feeling afraid that the melting pot has worked all too well, and you peer around corners hoping to flush some roaring or rampant Pitchfork Tillman.

But when you talk to these delegates you are reassured. These delegates are people. They are diverse, quick on the draw, when it comes to a cork or an idea, and just cantankerous enough to know that no outsider is going to rope and hogtie them and brand them with a swastika, or a hammer and sickle. You fell better when you get an earful of the rock-and-sock arguments going on around here, even in this big family reunion.

It wouldn't do a bit of harm if to hold a franchise, every New York night club columnist had to do a stretch at every national political convention. They're marvelous cures for ingrowing newyorkitis. Any urbane, sophisticated citizen of ready wit, impeccable tailoring and suave manners is just as apt to come from somewhere away out the sticks as from any big town.

Man and boy, I have seen a lot of these big run-togethers. You used to look for the power equilibrium—a balance of power set-up which had little to do with any intangibles or abstractions of constitutional government, but rather with the hard exactions of who could deliver whom and for what.

It's different, here today. There is less of the mood of the "smoke-filled room" and more of the mood of Kipling's "Recessional." At the hotel desk, I heard an old gentleman murmur reverently, as he read a newspaper headline, "Lord God of hosts, be with us yet".—Copyright, 1940, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

Motive Seen As Clear

From the Johnstown, Pa., Tribune

The only logical explanation of President Roosevelt's action in naming Henry L. Stimson secretary of war and Col. Frank Knox as secretary of the navy is that the president is determined to carry out his desire to have the United States actively enter the war in Europe. Both Stimson and Knox have been outspoken interventionists, and the convictions they hold fit nicely into the plans of Mr. Roosevelt to surround himself with men who feel as he does about taking an active part in another war on European soil.

The fact that a large majority of the American people, admittedly pro-Ally in sentiment, are opposed to sending the youth of this country to fight in European battlefields is ignored by the president. The admitted unpreparedness of this country to participate in a major war at this time is likewise ignored.

The American people are almost a unit in backing the plans of the government to build up an invincible fighting force that may be called upon to defend this nation from aggression, but they will not willingly embark upon a suicidal expedition on foreign soil for which we are wholly unprepared.

If there ever was a time when Congress should remain on the job and keep a tight rein on the military establishment, that time is the present.

A Strong and Appealing Platform Is Evolved

BY REASON of rapidly changing conditions in a war-torn world, it is exceedingly difficult to lay down a practical working formula for the guidance of an American political party. The party is firmly opposed to involvement in foreign war. That is plain horse sense in view of our utter unpreparedness. But it stands as firmly for a "prompt, orderly and realistic" building of our national defense to the point of defending ourselves and our liberties, and upholding the Monroe doctrine which in itself represents an important measure of that defense.

At the same time, no door is closed to extension of aid to all peoples fighting for liberty, or whose liberty is threatened, such as may be possible within the law and not inconsistent with our own defense needs. Particularly forceful is the denunciation of "explosive utterances" by our executive and such acts and proceedings that might lead to war without congressional authorization. The latter is a subject on which the Congress has been amply advised and has heeded in its abandonment of the plan to adjourn.

The New Deal failures are catalogued in telling fashion but in each instance there is the offering of a well-studied improvement or substitute designed to remedy or offset the failures listed. As a constructive document, it is superb.

The plank on labor is brief but to the point. Experience has shown beyond all cavil that improvement of the National Labor Relations act is imperative. The plank on agriculture is unusually strong, pointing the way to a resumption of productiveness under private control along with sensible conservation measures as against bureaucratic bossism and enforced scarcity. The plank on government and business is succinct and typifies a fundamental point of the Republican philosophy, which is that private enterprise must be encouraged within a minimum of governmental regulation to the end that production can be increased and not restricted. The national need makes that as imperative as it is obvious.

There will be ample time in which to discuss the other planks, as well as these mentioned, but a first reading shows that the various subjects have had the benefit of serious thought and in each instance they have epitomized the needs involved in a sound, clear, forthright, and appealing manner. In brief, the Republicans have done well with the difficult task of erecting a platform and it should serve as a great beacon light to guide the country out of the shoals, away from the raging tempests and into a safe haven.

Mass-Production Of Airplanes

SKEPTICISM in the aircraft industry as to possibilities for mass-production of airplanes probably arises from lack of knowledge of the refinements developed in recent years in the manufacture of automobiles.

The Liberty airplane engine produced by the United States automobile industry during the World war never won much acclaim. Perhaps the memory of those days have something to do with the present attitude of aircraft manufacturers toward quantity production. But that was twenty years ago and in the meantime the methods and quality of automobile manufacture have changed as much as the superficial appearance of the vehicles.

In making the mass-produced and interchangeable parts of the modern automobile engine, machines now work to minute tolerances. The honing of bearings is done by machines which reject an error of one-millionth of an inch, an accuracy which the handicraft methods still employed in most aircraft manufacturing can not even rival.

If aircraft manufacturing is "backward" in such matters, it is not the fault of the technicians, but of lack of opportunity to develop quantity methods. Manufacture has been largely experimental. Models have changed, not yearly but continually. The market would not permit quantity output of any one model, even if the keen technical competition had permitted it.

The big difficulty the layman has foreseen in mass-producing aircraft is in the building of wings and fuselages, involving the use of millions of tiny hand-set rivets. But Henry Ford says this can be overcome by substituting welding and brazing, which, if true, certainly would save time.

A greater obstacle may prove finally to be the conservatism of present aircraft manufacturers, who well might resent the invasion of their field by mass-producing competitors. Their co-operation is indispensable, however, and their patriotism will not be found wanting.

Determined upon Security

IT was by unanimous vote that the House of Representatives passed the Vinson bill authorizing the building of a two-ocean navy for the United States, thereby serving notice more effectively than anything else that has been done that the United States means business when it says that European aggressions will not be tolerated in the Western Hemisphere.

Here is one cold fact that the dictators must take into account—complete unanimity on a naval defense superior to anything the world has yet seen. Because of the unanimous vote in the House, Senate approval of the measure when it considers it is a foregone conclusion.

One factor that has promoted the two-ocean navy is the French defeat. Another is the knowledge that Japan is building super-battleships, for what purpose is not hard to surmise. The United States now is in the position of being forced to protect itself against any combination of enemies, either in the Pacific or in the Atlantic, or both.

This tremendous sea power has been forced upon the United States against its will and desire, and only those governments scheming to violate the territory of the Western Hemisphere have cause for alarm. For them, the authorization of 200 modern warships at a cost estimated at $4,000,000,000 should recommend a second thought.

At any time, if conditions warrant, the Washington government may suspend plans for naval construction. If the British and what has been salvaged of the French fleet can continue to control the seas, a portion of the program can be held in abeyance.

But, one way or another, the United States is determined upon security from the aggressions which have made Europe a scrap heap.

Another Highway Safety Gadget

NEW SAFETY GADGETS continue to be developed. Among the latest is a neon-lighted traffic line, consisting of neon tubing placed under a red transparent covering of plastic material imbedded in the pavement. The units of light, thirty to sixty inches in length, are said to be clearly visible through heavy fog, rain and the glare of oncoming headlights.

The line lights are being tried out in Little Rock, Ark., and have proved so satisfactory that test installations are to be made along the Arkansas state highways. It is planned to place the units in a continuous line on curves and hills, and at intervals of fifty feet on straight, level stretches. Whether such an elaborate use would be as utilitarian as the reflector systems or within reasonable financial upkeep reach remains to be disclosed.

At real danger points, however, it would appear that this new device would be most helpful and an added safeguard against accidents, for which the growing casualty record indicates a need.

"The people of America," advises the Kansas City Star, "now have a supreme opportunity to learn what it means to keep their feet on the ground." And their shirts where their shirts ought to be.

It appears that the move to add another month to the year has been temporarily abandoned, or until it can be learned how Hitler is going to come out with his endeavor to turn the year into one long night.

You can always identify the nations that are free countries, says the man at the next desk. They are those whose citizens complain more than they suffer.

The Opposite of "Moocher"

By MARSHALL MASLIN

Nobody likes moochers—and why should we? They are people who haven't heard about the doctrine of Give and Take, or have decided that only half of it fits them. They take but they don't give. And they figure that this puts them just that much ahead of the poor idiots who don't play the game that way.

Marshall Maslin

A mooch, will ask you for a cigarette when he has a full pack of his own. He'll borrow a dollar and put it in his savings account. (That isn't just fancy: I knew a man who used to borrow from friends—fifty cents at a time—and run away to the bank with it.) . . . He'll borrow your car and bring it back with the gas tank empty. . . . He has heard somewhere that it is more blessed to give than to receive and he is generously willing for you to have your full share of the blessings of this life. . . . I don't like moochers. You don't, either. Sometimes I think that even the moocher doesn't really like himself. . . . Let's not talk about him any more. He's an unpleasant subject and probably incorrigible.

But there are also some very fine human beings who are the exact opposite of the mooch and they aren't perfect, either.

They know about giving and taking, too, but they concentrate on the giving and decline to take. . . . They are stiffnecked and proud and will accept nothing. Their slogan is: "I hate to be under obligations to anybody!"

And if they ever do accept anything from a friend, they pay him back so swiftly that it isn't funny. They are so prompt that they sometimes hurt their friends' feelings. Because a true friend LIKES to do something for you. He WANTS to feel that he is helpful, that you and he share obligations and gladly give and graciously receive.

The moocher wrecks every friendship on the shoals of his selfishness. But the man who hates to be under obligations also spoils a few friendships. Every human being should know how to give easily, but there should also be a technique about receiving. (It comes naturally to some; I don't have any trouble.) It should be acquired by everybody. . . . But don't go into it too intensely because the line between generous receiving and miserable mooching is a narrow one—and easy to step over.

Willkie Is Seen As "White Hope" Of Republicans

Hugh Johnson

PHILADELPHIA, June 27. — All Republicans know that nothing short of some kind of blitzkreig can bring home their bacon. They have tried several sorts. Governor Stassen made a speech which reads well. It just didn't click. Neither did Joe Martin's. Finally, the broadcasting companies sacrificed about $55,000 worth of commercial time because Mr. Hoover wanted two hours on the air. Probably, looking back at Cleveland, this was intended to provide for about thirty minutes of applause—I am always tempted to confuse that word with "applesauce." They look, and are, so much alike. However you spell it, it didn't come. The merry-go-round broke down.

The 1936 Cleveland cry "We want H-o-over" was repeated in a staged demonstration at his hotel before he embarked for the great adventure but, at the convention, the nearest I heard to that was a drunk in a corner apparently aiming at "We Want Hoover". The nearest he could mumble sounded to me something like, "Hoo wants Weever?" The swan song of the Great Engineer dug his grave with his teeth, or at least with his vocal organs. It was pathetic because nobody denies that Mr. Hoover is an abused baby, a very able leader who somehow got the short end of the stick in every break since 1929.

Spark Plug Needed

What the Republicans need is a spark-plug. They have thus far tried out everything in the old garage. Stassen-Martin-Hoover. No soap! So far as inspiration and zip are concerned this convention to date looks more like the annual get-together of the Amalgamated Order of Morticians, Undertakers and Embalmers, than a conclave of a great party at a critical period in our history.

What's the trouble? I'm just an amateur, but to me it seems very plain. For the Republicans this situation needs a landslider—an architect of avalanches. The whole town boils with the knowledge that he is right here—being bottled up—or attempted to be bottled up—by all the old mechanical tricks in the outdated Republican professional political bag. It is like trying to suppress a cyclone with a palm leaf fan.

Would "Go to Town"

If Wendell Willkie with no start, no organization, no political pap, patronage or pull can blitzkrieg a hand-picked, hand-packed Republican Convention as he is doing to this one, what would he do to the country if they took off his wraps and let him run? Everybody seems to realize what he would do. He would go to town. He is the only Republican who could.

The worst thing that could happen to him has happened, the Morgan crowd has appeared with Willkie buttons. Taft headquarters is broadcasting that, but not mentioning that the simple senator has the support of Joe Pew. Mr. Pew is one of the most sincere and able of Americans, but he is a forthwright clock-turner-back. In the world of today he is an echo of the past and his support is politically as poisonous as the Liberty League's.

The Kill of Death

He and Joe Grundy haunt these halls like Count Dracula — the "dead-undead"—and theirs is the kiss of death. Morgan support of Willkie is something of the same nature, but his whole record shows that he is his own man whom Wall Street follows toward the new light—and not the reverse. His campaign, if nominated, would make that plain beyond peradventure.

Everything that has happened here shows that Mr. Willkie is the one Republican white hope, a spontaneous and explosive popular choice. His woeful weakness is that he has only amateur political guidance. No practical politician is rounding up the dogie delegates. Mr. Willkie won't make any promises. That would be an asset in a campaign, but in the back-room horse-trading of this convention it is tragic. Yet, all signs still point to his nomination, regardless of precedent. Abroad and at home, 1940 is truly the year of miracles.—Distributed by United Syndicate, Inc.

AND IT WILL BE THEIR FAULT IF THEY CAN'T HATCH 'EM

Unseen Contingencies Handicap GOP Platform Text, Mark Sullivan Says

By MARK SULLIVAN

PHILADELPHIA, June 27—About war and foreign relations, the Republicans tried to define the undefineable. Literally that. They tried to write a platform plank which would stand up in a hundred future contingencies — all unknown, all arising out of the unpredictable spasms of a world in convulsion.

Mark Sullivan

On war and foreign relations, there was never but one good line for the Republican platform. Ex-President Hoover saw it when in his address he said:

"In a few days, this convention will have chosen our national leader (that is, nominee for president). The president (Mr. Roosevelt) will be able to secure from him the views of our party upon these transcendant questions".

Remarkable Declaration

That was a remarkable declaration of Mr. Hoover. Hardly anything like it ever occurred before. In effect Mr. Hoover was saying that from day to day events in Europe will take turns—and darts and dashes and plunges—which no one can foresee; that these sudden developments will concern the United States; that in the face of them our government will have to take steps of one kind or another; that no one can know in advance what the appropriate step would be in each unforeseeable case; and that if President Roosevelt, as he acts on each occasion, would like to have the views of the opposition party, he should consult the as yet unknown Republican presidential nominee.

That suggestion of Mr. Hoover was extraordinary—but we live in a time when only the extraordinary is realistic.

If the spirit of that suggestion—which is the only practicable thing to do under the circumstances—had been written into the Republican platform, the plank on war and foreign relations might read somewhat as follows:

Unfathomable Subject

"We the Republican party are asking the country to elect us to power next November, and install us in power next January. We are asking for the job of managing the United States for a period of four years. During that four years, and also between now and January, there will occur in Europe and elsewhere events which will affect the United States, and which will call on the United States for appropriate actions.

"Under these conditions we refuse to foist upon the public the pretense that we, here in Philadelphia, in June, 1940, can write a statement of policy about war and foreign relations which will adequately provide for each and every emergency and condition which may arise during four years until 1944.

"We therefore say simply: that if entrusted with power we will meet each situation as it arises; that we will treat each situation with the best intelligence we possess, taking into account the conditions at the time; and that in each situation we will act in accord with the best interests of the United States."

Simple Candor and Truth

No doubt a political party would fear to write such a plank. They might fear it would lay them open to jeering charges of "evasion". But in fact such a declaration would be simple candor and truth. Precisely that program, or that lack of program, is the course that will be followed, regardless of what party is in power, or what individual is the next president.

This is a serious-minded convention, the personnel of delegates exceptionally conscious of responsibility. One wished them well, and know they would do their best. Yet repeatedly you were conscious of how much events are beyond their power.

War Influences Felt

You left a session of the convention, and got back to the hotel late. You picked up a midnight issue of the following morning's Philadelphia Inquirer. In in you read, in a headline equalling that of the convention, something about Europe, the future of the French navy. And you felt the future of the French fleet might have, in some distant development, consequences to America as great as anything this convention can write into a platform.

Yet one got assurance from the high level of things down here. The elevation of Ex-President Hoover's speech, regardless of agreement or disagreement about details of it; and the sense of character and dependability in Mr. Hoover's personality as he stood before the convention, all suggested a passage from Marvell's oration ode on Cromwell

He nothing common did, nor mean,

Why Money Rates Are Low

From the Johnstown, Pa., Democrat

Money rates are low. Ask a banker why and he will reply that rates are low because there is more money available for investment than there are places to invest it. Perhaps. And yet who is there who doesn't need more money—more money in his business, in his manner of living, more money generally? There can be no lack of opportunities to invest. The factor lacking is security. As war sperads over the earth, secure investments grow less and less for "no man wants to build a house the day before an earthquake or plant trees before a forest fire."

Wealth which should mean money is being burned up, blown up and cast into unproductive forms. Wealth in the form of properties and commodities is being destroyed on a scale never before paralleled in the history of the world. Perhaps as the days go by the demand for money, real money, will slowly gather momentum. Great wars are usually followed by famine and pestilence which increase the need for money but decrease security.

However, the probabilities are that the bankers, if they were telling all of the truth, would point out that one reason money rates are low is because money has been cheapened. Cheap money naturally produces low interest rates. When the gold content of the American dollar was increased, 100 cents were transformed into 59 cents. We are supposed to have some 18,000,000,000 gold dollars buried somewhere. On the basis of pre-Roosevelt standards, these $18,000,000,000 are worth about $10,000,000,000. And so, the probabilities are interest rates are low because money has been cheapened.

Motive Seen As Clear

From the Johnstown, Pa., Tribune

The only logical explanation of President Roosevelt's action in naming Henry L. Stimson secretary of war and Col. Frank Knox as secretary of the navy is that the president is determined to carry out his desire to have the United States actively enter the war in Europe. Both Stimson and Knox have been outspoken interventionists, and the convictions they hold fit nicely into the plans of Mr. Roosevelt to surround himself with men who feel as he does about taking an active part in another war on European soil.

The fact that a large majority of the American people, admittedly pro-Ally in sentiment, are opposed to sending the youth of this country to fight in European battlefields is ignored by the president. The admitted unpreparedness of this country to participate in a major war at this time is likewise ignored.

The American people are almost a unit in backing the plans of the government to build up an invincible fighting force that may be called upon to defend this nation from aggression, but they will not willingly embark upon a suicidal expedition on foreign soil for which we are wholly unprepared.

If there ever was a time when Congress should remain on the job and keep a tight rein on the military establishment, that time is the present.

Homespun Fellows Are Fading From Political Scene

Edwin C. Hill

The homespun politician still has his place, in the scheme of things. Over in Philadelphia the other day I saw George Ade's county chairman going through the hotel lobby. We had already spotted a pair of congress gaiters from Arkansas, but we didn't know there was a linen duster left anywhere in the country. But the county chairman wore one, and with his iron-rimmed spectacles, varnished straw hat, shrewd eyes and nimbus of white hair, he could have walked on in that memorable role. He was having the time of his life.

In neccessarily brief and swift inspections, we haven't as yet seen a celluiloid collar. We have chalked up eleven bandanna handkerchiefs, two palm leaf fans, eleven big wallops of Missouri twist, chewing tobacco carried in the hip pocket, three alpaca suits, and two toothbrushes worn in the vest pocket. There is quite a scattering of red suspenders. There is also prevalent the traditional convention brand of stogies, and stem-winding watches have been visible. One had a hunting case with a stag on it. It made me homesick.

Schoolbook Rhyme

An early-day schoolbook rhyme kept coming back to me:

When Washington was president,
As cold as any icicle,
He never on a railroad went,
And never rode a bicycle.

It was perhaps this bit of nostalgic doggerel which kept me alert to signs of the homesun American genus politico, as above. But I am coming to my story from the wrong way. The point is that the above citations are exceptions and therefore news—at least human news if not hot news. These delegates from the forty-eight still sovereign commonwealths are, with few exceptions, smartly tailored men, with a big-town look about them, even if they came from a whistling pool. In the sense that we used to know them, and sometimes lampoon them, there are no more rustics. A friend indicated to a snappily dressed man who looked like he had just stepped out of a New York club. He is from a small town in the Ozark Mountains.

Are Passing

One dressed-up delegate, with whom I conversed, talked like a hillbilly. One gentleman of somewhat bucolic appearance, was identified as a brilliant professor at one of the great Eastern universities. But, on the whole, most of the regional and urban or rural tags are passing. One can't help feeling afraid that the melting pot has worked all too well, and you peer around corners hoping to flush some roaring or rampant Pitchfork Tillman.

But when you talk to these delegates you are reassured. These delegates are people. They are diverse, quick on the draw, when it comes to a cork or an idea, and just cantankerous enough to know that no outsider is going to rope and hog-tie them and brand them with a swastika, or a hammer and sickle. You fell better when you get an earful of the rock-and-sock arguments going on around here, even in this big family reunion.

It wouldn't do a bit of harm if to hold a franchise, every New York night club columnist had to do a stretch at every national political convention. They're marvelous cures for ingrowing newyorkitis. Any urbane, sophisticated citizen of ready wit, impeccable tailoring and suave manners is just as apt to come from somewhere away out the sticks as from any big town.

Man and boy, I have seen a lot of these big run-togethers. You used to look for the power equilibrium—a balance of power set-up which had little to do with any intangibles or abstractions of constitutional government, but rather with the hard exactions of who could deliver whom and for what.

It's different, here today. There is less of the mood of the "smoke-filled room" and more of the mood of Kipling's "Recessional." At the hotel desk, I heard an old gentleman murmur reverently, as he read a newspaper headline. "Lord God of hosts, be with us yet".—Copyright, 1940, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

Death on the Highway and Two People Whose Secret Love Affair Had To Be Told at Last

BY GLENN REILLY

Perry screwed up his homely face he turned down the gas under truckers' way station coffee ns, and grinned apologetically Sally, the waitress. "No hurry this coffee," he said.

"You've owned this place long ough to know, Perry," she af- med. "What with a bad night this dump perched on the peak a mountain range, there won't of the boys be in for another ur."

"I could have waited another hour make that batch," the owner mmented, "but you never can tell. e of the drivers are pretty will- to take chances for a good cup coffee."

"I know what you're thinking, rry," Sally said, noting the long he shot her as he bent under counter for something. "You're king of me and Red . . . and my. Well, you needn't!"

"We got into a little scrap."

e colored. "You're wrong, Sally, asn't thinking of that at all. ve you think I don't appreciate the way you stick up here on of a bare mountain and working this for me—Matter of fact, I just—well thinking!"

he girl looked at the clock be- the pie shelves. "You've got ght to act hurt if I crack jokes the boys when they come in. It's part of the business, and etimes they need little joking a long trip up here when it's And what if I did make dates Red and Jimmy once or twice." Let's drop it, Sally," he pleaded, ing the book he had found un- the counter. "Want me to read more of Swinburne to you, or d you perfer something else to- t until the boys start coming erry opened the book at random his voice was surprisingly gen- and clear as he began reading easy familiarity.

ey were like that when the front door gusted open and Jimmy burst in, his eyes wary and one of them battered nearly closed.

"Where's your rig? I didn't hear you stop," said Sally. "And what happened to your eye?"

The tall driver breathed deeply and slumped down on a stool before the counter."

"Tangled up and dropped over the shoulder into Eagle Canyon . . and Red and his rig with it!" Jimmy got out with ominous restraint. His hard, long-fingered hands gripping the slab of the counter with their palms. There were scuffed marks showing blood at the edges on them, like a fighter's when he doesn't use gloves. The girl intuitively guessed.

"You and Red were scrapping!" she accused, taking one of his hands and feeling the controlled shaking that still possessed them. Jimmy jerked it away and wiped the back of it on his heavy jacket.

"It wasn't any fault of mine, Sally, honest," he said pleading. "That annual dance the driver's union is throwing next Saturday—Red claimed you told him he could take you. I told him he was a liar!"

"The dance!" Sally's mouth opened and she drew her breath in sharply. "Why, Jimmy, I had forgotten all about the dance. I wouldn't have gone with Red anyway!" Perry shut his book quietly and begaan to draw a cup of coffee.

"Looks like you got yourself into a jam this time, Jimmy. Want me to call anyone for you?" he offered. His eyes watched the two of them.

"You keep out of this, bookworm," the brawny trucker commanded harshly, on the edge of a desperate reaction. "Sally's business is with me." He gulped two quick swallows of the hot brown liquid and turned his eyes back to the girl.

"I admit that Red and me had words before we started up, down in Upas Junction."

Sally said, "But how did Red happen to go over the edge of Eagle Canyon? He's been up the grade a thousand times. He knew it like the back of his hand, even in storms!" The picture of the two rigs, hurtling together down 1,000 feet of almost sheer droy to a rocky canyon floor, became real. She shuddered and leaned on the back counter, her eyes closed.

"That's just it, Sally, you've got to see," Jimmy said with intense earnestness. "We got into a little scrap down below, where the boys were all waiting for it to clear up a bit before they started the long haul up. They stopped us."

"And then——?"

Jimmy's eyes narrowed hotly. "I know that trail, too! We offered to race to here, the winner getting to take you to the dance. It was fair. We were pretty even all the way to the rim of Eagle Canyon. The road is just wide enough for two rigs on the curve, but I got the inside strip next to the cliff wall right as we both swung into it. Red cut too short and his wheels tangled with mine. The rigs swung out and over . . . and I jumped. Red couldn't because his cab door was evidently jammed."

In the silence only the far-seeming moan of the high ridge wind and the even ticking of the cheap alarm clock back of the pies sounded. Eternity swung suspended for a long moment, and then the girl laughed. Not loud, but with a tinge of hysteria.

"And you couldn't have known, either of you, because it was to be a secret!" she whispered unevenly. "Perry and I have been married nearly a month now!"—Distributed by United Feature Syndicate.

THE DAILY STORY

WAY STATION

Death on the Highway and Two People Whose Secret Love Affair Had To Be Told at Last

BY GLENN REILLY

Perry screwed up his homely face he turned down the gas under truckers' way station coffee ns, and grinned apologetically Sally, the waitress. "No hurry this coffee," he said.

"You've owned this place long ugh to know, Perry," she afmed. "What with a bad night this dump perched on the peak a mountain range, there won't of the boys be in for another r."

"I could have waited another hour make that batch," the owner mmented, "but you never can tell. e of the drivers are pretty will- to take chances for a good cup coffee."

"I know what you're thinking, rry," Sally said, noting the long he shot her as he bent under counter for something. "You're nking of me and Red . . . and my. Well, you needn't!"

"We got into a little scrap."

He colored. "You're wrong, Sally, wasn't thinking of that at all. ybe you think I don't appreciate the way you stick up here on of a bare mountain and working this for me—Matter of fact, I just—well thinking!"

The girl looked at the clock be- the pie shelves. "You've got right to act hurt if I crack jokes the boys when they come in e. It's part of the business, and metimes they need little joking a long trip up here when it's And what if I did make dates Red and Jimmy once or twice." Let's drop it, Sally," he pleaded, ning the book he had found un- the counter. "Want me to read more of Swinburne to you, or d you perfer something else to- it until the boys start coming dake it Swinburne,' she agreed dlessly. "What the words say t matter."

rry opened the book at random his voice was surprisingly gen- and clear as he began reading easy familiarity.

ey were like that when the front door gusted open and Jimmy burst in, his eyes wary and one of them battered nearly closed.

"Where's your rig? I didn't hear you stop," said Sally. "And what happened to your eye?"

The tall driver breathed deeply and slumped down on a stool before the counter."

"Tangled up and dropped over the shoulder into Eagle Canyon . . and Red and his rig with it!" Jimmy got out with ominous restraint. His hard, long-fingered hands gripping the slab of the counter with their palms. There were scuffed marks showing blood at the edges on them, like a fighter's when he doesn't use gloves. The girl intuitively guessed.

"You and Red were scrapping!" she accused, taking one of his hands and feeling the controlled shaking that still possessed them. Jimmy jerked it away and wiped the back of it on his heavy jacket.

"It wasn't any fault of mine, Sally, honest," he said pleading. "That annual dance the driver's union is throwing next Saturday—Red claimed you told him he could take you. I told him he was a liar!"

"The dance!" Sally's mouth opened and she drew her breath in sharply. "Why, Jimmy, I had forgotten all about the dance. I wouldn't have gone with Red anyway!" Perry shut his book quietly and begaan to draw a cup of coffee.

"Looks like you got yourself into a jam this time, Jimmy. Want me to call anyone for you?" he offered. His eyes watched the two of them.

"You keep out of this, bookworm," the brawny trucker commanded harshly, on the edge of a desperate reaction. "Sally's business is with me." He gulped two quick swallows of the hot brown liquid and turned his eyes back to the girl.

"I admit that Red and me had words before we started up, down in Upas Junction."

Sally said, "But how did Red happen to go over the edge of Eagle Canyon? He's been up the grade a thousand times. He knew it like the back of his hand, even in storms!" The picture of the two rigs, hurtling together down 1,000 feet of almost sheer droy to a rocky canyon floor, became real. She shuddered and leaned on the back counter, her eyes closed.

"That's just it, Sally, you've got to see," Jimmy said with intense earnestness. "We got into a little scrap down below, where the boys were all waiting for it to clear up a bit before they started the long haul up. They stopped us."

"And then——?"

Jimmy's eyes narrowed hotly. "I know that trail, too! We offered to race to here, the winner getting to take you to the dance. It was fair. We were pretty even all the way to the rim of Eagle Canyon. The road is just wide enough for two rigs on the curve, but I got the inside strip next to the cliff wall right as we both swung into it. Red cut too short and his wheels tangled with mine. The rigs swung out and over . . . and I jumped. Red couldn't because his cab door was evidently jammed."

In the silence only the far-seeming moan of the high ridge wind and the even ticking of the cheap alarm clock back of the pies sounded. Eternity swung suspended for a long moment, and then the girl laughed. Not loud, but with a tinge of hysteria.

"And you couldn't have known, either of you, because it was to be a secret!" she whispered unevenly. "Perry and I have been married nearly a month now!"—Distributed by United Feature Syndicate.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By Shepard Barclay

"The Authority on Authorities"

HARK! DANGER SIGNALS!

AIR RAID alarms have been devised for the best interests of the community. They would be of no value if nobody paid heed to them, but instead everybody ran out into the open streets to watch the excitement. That would be just what the enemy would love, and therefore they seldom have such an effect. The same kind of warnings go unheeded, however, in the mimic war which is bridge. Plenty of players keep right on in the face of danger signals to unnecessary defeats.

Both North and East advertised to South the fact that West had a lot of hearts, but South was not listening. He could have reasoned it all out. North showed enough diamonds and clubs to bid both of those suits—in fact, a very large number of them, or otherwise he would never have taken out South's business double of spades.

East made it clear to any careful kibitzer that he not only had enough spades to bid them, plus enough clubs to double that suit, but that he also held enough diamonds to double them. Had he not held a sizeable number of diamonds, he should not have doubled clubs. In consequence of having so many spades, clubs and diamonds, he could not have held more than perhaps one heart, and possibly none.

Since North's bidding of the two suits proclaimed that he hadn't enough hearts to support his partner's suit, it should have been clear to South that they could be nowhere except bunched in West's hand. Over East's double of 3-Clubs, he should have bid only 3-Hearts. Maybe West would have doubled this and maybe he would not. In any event, though, the play that developed would have set this contract one trick, not two.

Tomorrow's Problem

(Dealer: North. East-West vulnerable.)

Over 1-Club by East on this deal, why should South not make a shutout jump bid of 3-Hearts or 4-Hearts?

Water Spots

If a wash garment has become water spotted, hold it over a steaming teakettle until it's moist, then shake it in the air until dry and press it carefully with a warm—not hot—iron. This is usually effective.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By Shepard Barclay

HARK! DANGER SIGNALS!

AIR RAID alarms have been devised for the best interests of the community. They would be of no value if nobody paid heed to them, but instead everybody ran out into the open streets to watch the excitement. That would be just what the enemy would love, and therefore they seldom have such an effect. The same kind of warnings go unheeded, however, in the mimic war which is bridge. Plenty of players keep right on in the face of danger signals to unnecessary defeats.

Both North and East advertised to South the fact that West had a lot of hearts, but South was not listening. He could have reasoned it all out. North showed enough diamonds and clubs to bid both of those suits—in fact, a very large number of them, or otherwise he would never have taken out South's business double of spades.

East made it clear to any careful kibitzer that he not only had enough spades to bid them, plus enough clubs to double that suit, but that he also held enough diamonds to double them. Had he not held a sizeable number of diamonds, he should not have doubled clubs. In consequence of having so many spades, clubs and diamonds, he could not have held more than perhaps one heart, and possibly none.

Since North's bidding of the two suits proclaimed that he hadn't enough hearts to support his partner's suit, it should have been clear to South that they could be nowhere except bunched in West's hand. Over East's double of 3-Clubs, he should have bid only 3-Hearts. Maybe West would have doubled this and maybe he would not. In any event, though, the play that developed would have set this contract one trick, not two.

Tomorrow's Problem

(Dealer: North. East-West vulnerable.)

Over 1-Club by East on this deal, why should South not make a shutout jump bid of 3-Hearts or 4-Hearts?

Water Spots

If a wash garment has become water spotted, hold it over a steaming teakettle until it's moist, then shake it in the air until dry and press it carefully with a warm—not hot—iron. This is usually effective.

Vacations are entirely different om what they were when I was unger. Then the whole family cked up and left on a train. We nt to a fishing lodge where the od was good and the water dendable. We got "acclimated" in day or two — that meant really t elimination became normal.

Different Now

Vacations with the advent of the tomobile adventure are cheaper d easier, and more frequent, hich is a good thing, but they are ore individualists than they used be — much more responsibility in the hands of the vacationist. e engineer and conductor of the in in the old days saw to it that got there safely. Now the man the wheel of the car has to asme that duty—so he should be efully selected. And for himself ought to learn to sit at the wheel operly so that he doesn't ruin his ture and spine in the effort. d take a little leisure to smoke cigarette after breakfast: it esn't make a great deal of diffence if you don't get to the next wn exactly by 12:20; suppose you n't get there till 12:40. Every vacationist should have a phoid vaccination before starting on the tourist vacation. At st within ten years before. Drinkg water is picked up here and re and carries a typhoid hazard. st of our cases of typhoid today found in wanderers.

Loaded for Trouble

Dr. Gibbs believes in medicine d antiseptics and bandages, and medical kit was carried in a parate grip when he left on his cation. It looked a little as if he re going to join an army at the nt. I don't think you need to e as much as he does. But iodine d sterilized gauze and bandages d adhesive are fundamental. And me salve for sunburn; any kind of ve will do — special sun tan ve is not very different from the ers.

A bottle of calamine lotion is a d thing for insect bites and deritis venenata. Dermatitis venata is the eruption on the skin m plants. Ivy poisoning is the st, but there are several other ts. Plant dermatitis always ses burning and itching. Simple medies are the most effective. an the skin affected — with oline, and then soap and water, ore putting on the calamine lo-n.

Director Considers Plea for Freedom By W. P. Lawson

ANNAPOLIS, Md., June 27 (AP)—A plea for freedom in time to celebrate his wedding anniversary Saturday has been filed with parole Director Herman M. Moser by William P. Lawson, imprisoned ex-police commissioner of Baltimore.

Moser took the application under advisement and promised Lawson's wife he would act on it "promptly" but could not promise action by Saturday.

Lawson is serving a three-year sentence for conspiracy to defraud customers of his Baltimore brokerage house. He entered the House of Correction Jan. 13, 1939, and would, under ordinary routine, be eligible for discharge late next February.

He has been teaching in the prison school. Moser turned down his first parole application last February. Today, Moser noted that members of the jury which convicted the former commissioner had urged parole for him.

Director Considers Plea for Freedom By W. P. Lawson

ANNAPOLIS, Md., June 27 (AP)—A plea for freedom in time to celebrate his wedding anniversary Saturday has been filed with parole Director Herman M. Moser by William P. Lawson, imprisoned ex-police commissioner of Baltimore.

Moser took the application under advisement and promised Lawson's wife he would act on it "promptly" but could not promise action by Saturday.

Lawson is serving a three-year sentence for conspiracy to defraud customers of his Baltimore brokerage house. He entered the House of Correction Jan. 13, 1939, and would, under ordinary routine, be eligible for discharge late next February.

He has been teaching in the prison school. Moser turned down his first parole application last February. Today, Moser noted that members of the jury which convicted the former commissioner had urged parole for him.

Hurry-up Method In Teaching Is Termed Harmful

Grandmother Would Muzzle Sarcastic Teacher and Tells Why

By GARRY C. MYERS, PH.D.

Frequently, in this column, I have condemned stop-watch teaching and the school atmosphere of haste to which so many innocent, defenseless children must be exposed in so many classrooms.

In response to one such article, the following came from Roy Whitney, Director of Personnel for a large industrial concern, and author of "Morality in the Making." I am using his name and quoting with his permission.

"When I was in the Second grade," he writes, "a very well-meaning teacher habitually stood behind my seat in the corner of the classroom. When we were doing 'mental arithmetic', she frequently looked over my shoulder and said, 'Hurry, Roy, and you can beat.'

"Harry Croft was the chief competitor in the classroom—and soon he completed the addition first and the teacher was quite concerned that I was getting slower and slower, and she did all in her power to have me add faster.

"Today, if I were doing the simplest sum in an ordinary possible routine and my stenographer looked over my shoulder, my ability to add would be cut in half and my percentage of correctness would fall so low that I would not trust myself to use such figures.

"I have not the slightest doubt that all this is the complex rising out of a well-intentioned Miss — who put self-consciousness into addition for me. It has cost me hours of inconvenience and makes it impossible for me to keep the score during bowling or other simple operations, the cause of which I would probably not have suspected had it not been for the 'psychologizing' of writers like yourself."

Undoubtedly, hundreds of my readers could match this testimony with similar ones.

A mother of nine and grandmother of six writes:

"I was particularly interested in the article you had some while ago about the sarcastic teacher. If I had my way I would muzzle every one of them for there's nothing that takes the heart and life out of a student like being held up to ridicule before a class by a mean, sarcastic teacher.

"I know how it feels because I had one and it was during the adolescent period and I was so sensitive. He would make fun of me or of some part of my clothing and get me crying,—then laugh at me. I am glad you give these backward, sensitive students a chance to write to you and talk their trouble over with you."

I do wish I might persuade all teachers to be on guard against ridicule and sarcasm. Though I realize that we are all tempted at times to indulge in this human torture, I believe that if we could keep trying to put ourselves in the place of the sensitive youth, we would transgress in this direction far less frequently.

Solving Parent Problems

Q. Would you advise a dash of cold water into the face of the young child in a violent rage?

A. Yes; and it should be a big glass full, preferably a quart pail full. It's the shock that does the good work.

Q. My girl 6 is always tattling on her sister 9.

A. Quit paying her for tattling; quit punishing the older on the information volunteered by the younger.

Q. Would you question and cross-question a sixteen-year-old on his or her returning home at night on his or her conduct while away.

A. NO! No! No!!

Mexico Will Have Calmer Regime Despite Bloody Election Campaign

Feature Service

MEXICO CITY—Regardless of the winner in the July 7 presidential elections, Mexico appears headed for a more conservative regime for the six years beginning Dec. 1, 1940.

General Juan Andreu Almazan, the Independent candidate, set the pace by calling for a "return to a sane administration," the "clean-out" of Nazi and Communist doctrines within the government, and a regime under which both labor and industry could enjoy guaranties.

But as his campaign progressed it became increasingly apparent that General Manuel Avila Camacho, candidate of the revolutionary party, had definitely more conservative ideas than President Lazaro Cardenas as to how a country should be run.

Camacho made it clear in an interview with the Associated Press that the times called for a different procedure. He said it had been Cardenas' job to put into motion the revolutionary program for which Mexicans fought in 1910 when they overthrew Dictator-President Porfirio Diaz. Now that the program had been initiated, Camacho said, the next step would be to "level off," and to make the most of the advantages of the social reform program of Cardenas.

Cardenas' Policies At Issue

On their own initiative, citizens have made the radical policies of President Cardenas one of the chief issues of the campaign. He expropriated foreign oil properties valued at about $400,000,000; he seized from ranch and plantation owners—Mexicans and foreigners alike—thousands of acres of developed lands, and turned them over to peons. Labor has been given powers broad enough literally to wreck many industries and businesses; socialistic and communist elements have developed, critics charge, in high government circles.

General Manuel Camacho
Next Step: 'Level Off'

The campaign has been marred with much bloodshed. Almazan followers assert more than 50 of his advocates have been slain, that administration governors, military commanders and town mayors have attempted in every way they could to break up his meetings. On one occasion bullets were fired into the bedroom where Almazan was sleeping, but he escaped injury.

Expect No Revolution

There has been much talk of the possibilities of a revolution, but government officials say it is impossible because "the people are loyal to their government," and the election will be free and democratic.

Almazanistas say their supporters will go en masse to polling places to insist that their votes be counted.

Camacho is the candidate of the nation's only political party—the PRM (Partido de la Revolucion Mexicana, or Party of the Mexican Revolution).

Mexicans generally say there will be no post-election revolution because they have never won a revolution anyhow and they are tired of fighting.

Shoes Are Getting Crazier

Shoes are displacing hats as the craziest thing in a woman's wardrobe. Or aren't they crazy, those new shankless sandals with scooped-out heels, that Ginny Simms, NBC singer, is wearing at the left. But can she walk on them?

Variations on the shankless shoe with fantastic heel were shown in quantity at a New York meeting of shoe manufacturers. They'll be pushed for late summer, early fall wear.

You'll be a strong-minded woman if you don't eventually buy some of the trick-heeled output. New designs live up to their names: Sled, tractor, sleigh, crescent wedge, suspension, pyramid, keg, peg, Dutch boy, pinched wedge.

More conservative are the other three illustrated styles, recommended as comfortable travel or go-to-the-fair shoes. They are all lightweight, low-heeled. The hassock heel is the style feature of the feather-stitched shoe at the right.

A visiting shoemaker observed that few wedge soles were worn at the World's Fair. He was surprised because wedgies sold well this spring. This department is not surprised, and suggests that the shoemaker try wearing wedgies for a few weeks. He'll find the stiff, inflexible arch is uncomfortable and causes an awkward gait.

Mexico Will Have Calmer Regime Despite Bloody Election Campaign

Feature Service

MEXICO CITY—Regardless of the winner in the July 7 presidential elections, Mexico appears headed for a more conservative regime for the six years beginning Dec. 1, 1940.

General Juan Andreu Almazan, the Independent candidate, set the pace by calling for a "return to a sane administration," the "clean-out" of Nazi and Communist doctrines within the government, and a regime under which both labor and industry could enjoy guaranties.

But as his campaign progressed, it became increasingly apparent that General Manuel Avila Camacho, candidate of the revolutionary party, had definitely more conservative ideas than President Lazaro Cardenas as to how a country should be run.

Camacho made it clear in an interview with the Associated Press that the times called for a different procedure. He said it had been Cardenas' job to put into motion the revolutionary program for which Mexicans fought in 1910 when they overthrew Dictator-President Porfirio Diaz. Now that the program had been initiated, Camacho said, the next step would be to "level off," and to make the most of the advantages of the social reform program of Cardenas.

Cardenas' Policies At Issue

On their own initiative, citizens have made the radical policies of President Cardenas one of the chief issues of the campaign. He expropriated foreign oil properties valued at about $400,000,000; he seized from ranch and plantation owners—Mexicans and foreigners alike—thousands of acres of developed lands, and turned them over to peons. Labor has been given powers broad enough literally to wreck many industries and businesses; socialistic and communist elements have developed, critics charge, in high government circles.

General Manuel Camacho
Next Step: 'Level Off'

The campaign has been marred with much bloodshed. Almazan followers assert more than 50 of his advocates have been slain, that administration governors, military commanders and town mayors have attempted in every way they could to break up his meetings. On one occasion bullets were fired into the bedroom where Almazan was sleeping, but he escaped injury.

Expect No Revolution

There has been much talk of the possibilities of a revolution, but government officials say it is impossible because "the people are loyal to their government," and the election will be free and democratic.

Almazanistas say their supporters will go en masse to polling places to insist that their votes be counted.

Camacho is the candidate of the nation's only political party—the PRM (Partido de la Revolucion Mexicana, or Party of the Mexican Revolution).

Mexicans generally say there will be no post-election revolution because they have never won a revolution anyhow and they are tired of fighting.

She Fell for Him

ELIZABETH, N. J. (AP)—Helen Paczkoski, 19, couldn't get to the door fast enough when boy friend William Tuttle rang. Rushing downstairs, Helen couldn't make the turn at the second floor landing, her momentum carrying her through a window and into the yard.

Damages: a fractured left hip and elbow injuries.

Double-Duty Hen

WELCH, W. Va., June 26 (AP)—Farmer Marvin Price has a double-duty hen.

Not content he says, with laying an egg a day, each of the eggs is a double one. The eggs are about eight inches in circumference and in each is a smaller perfect egg. She has laid eight so far and seems to be in good health.

Collects Four-leaf Clovers as Hobby

FAIRMONT, W. Va., June 26 (AP)—Roman Fetherol isn't having much success this year in his quest for four-leaf clovers.

So far he has found only 750; last year by this time he said he had found more than 9,000.

In the past sixteen years Roman says he has found and saved more than 400,000 of the double-leafs.

His luck? He says it's only fair.

Passports Not Required Of U. S. Citizens

She Fell for Him

ELIZABETH, N. J. (AP)—Helen Paczkoski, 19, couldn't get to the door fast enough when boy friend William Tuttle rang. Rushing downstairs, Helen couldn't make the turn at the second floor landing, her momentum carrying her through a window and into the yard.

Damages: a fractured left hip and elbow injuries.

Double-Duty Hen

WELCH, W. Va., June 26 (AP)—Farmer Marvin Price has a double-duty hen.

Not content he says, with laying an egg a day, each of the eggs is a double one. The eggs are about eight inches in circumference and in each is a smaller perfect egg. She has laid eight so far and seems to be in good health.

Collects Four-leaf Clovers as Hobby

FAIRMONT, W. Va., June 26 (AP)—Roman Fetherol isn't having much success this year in his quest for four-leaf clovers.

So far he has found only 750; last year by this time he said he had found more than 9,000.

In the past sixteen years Roman says he has found and saved more than 400,000 of the double-leafs.

His luck? He says it's only fair.

Passports Not Required Of U. S. Citizens

OTTAWA, Ontario, June 27 (AP)—Prime Minister MacKenzie King told Commons that passports would not be required of U. S. citizens visiting Canada.

Effective July 1, Canadian citizens leaving to enter the United States however, will be required to show passports.

Quick Paint Job

BECKLEY, W. Va., June 26 (AP)—Twenty men combined a shellacking and a party the other night and it resulted in the Methodist church getting a badly needed coat of floor paint.

"Bring your paint brush and come to the church tonight," the Rev. J. M. Helm asked his board members.

They did and Mr. Helm provided the shellac and told them what he wanted done.

It Ain't Apple Blossoms You Smell, Soldier!

SUNNYSIDE, Calif. (AP)—In this intensive farming area, which also is the site of Moffet army air field, distinctions in odors are important.

Officers and men are being taught by Lieut. E. M. Hampton, chemical-warfare specialist, to distinguish between the scent of chloracetaphenone gas, which closely resembles that of apple blossoms, and the orchards.

Phosgene can be mistaken for the scent from new mown hay.

ing on the campus of the Romney grade school. The center was moved Tuesday from Pleasant Dale. The making of mattresses at the center is in charge of the local Farm Women's Club. The county program is under the supervision of Miss Nina Spiggle, Home demonstration agent.

Hampshire county was chosen as one of three counties in West Virginia as a test county for the practicability of the cotton mattress program. If successful in these counties the program will be adopted statewide. The cotton is supplied by the Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation and other necessary materials by the Agricultural Conservation Program. Families whose 1939 income was less than $400 may make application for a mattress. If approved they will be notified when to come to the center to make their mattress.

They did and Mr. Helm provided the shellac and told them what he wanted done.

It Ain't Apple Blossoms You Smell, Soldier!

SUNNYSIDE, Calif. (AP)—In this intensive farming area, which also is the site of Moffet army air field, distinctions in odors are important.

Officers and men are being taught by Lieut. E. M. Hampton, chemical-warfare specialist, to distinguish between the scent of chloracetaphenone gas, which closely resembles that of apple blossoms, and the orchards.

Phosgene can be mistaken for the scent from new mown hay.

ing on the campus of the Romney grade school. The center was moved Tuesday from Pleasant Dale. The making of mattresses at the center is in charge of the local Farm Women's Club. The county program is under the supervision of Miss Nina Spiggle, Home demonstration agent.

Hampshire county was chosen as one of three counties in West Virginia as a test county for the practicability of the cotton mattress program. If successful in these counties the program will be adopted statewide. The cotton is supplied by the Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation and other necessary materials by the Agricultural Conservation Program. Families whose 1939 income was less than $400 may make application for a mattress. If approved they will be notified when to come to the center to make their mattress.

Hartman's Hope for Life Rests with Governor Holt

CHARLESTON, W. Va., June 27 (AP) — Byzentine Hartman's hopes for more than twenty-four hours of life rested tonight with Governor Homer A. Holt, who has before him the condemned man's plea for commutation of a death sentence to life imprisonment.

The twenty-eight-year-old Hartman is to be hanged Friday at 9 p. m. for the shooting of Deputy Sheriff Wilbur H. Grubb last April 14 in Upshur county.

The deputy died of shotgun wounds after he tried to arrest Hartman on a charge of beating his mother.

Governor Holt, who has been considering the commutation petition since Monday, was given Hartman's complete court record and the report of two physicians that the man was sane and able to distinguish right from wrong.

Hartman pleaded guilty after a jury had found him sane. Circuit Judge John F. Brown imposed the death sentence May 16.

OUR local stores are the display rooms and warehouses for the world's finest products. Through the advertising columns of this newspaper the public can best be told where to buy this merchandise. People read this paper because they are interested in the news of the day and they welcome the opportunity to read about the goods offered by our local merchants.

ADVERTISING in this newspaper is good business not only because it reaches the right people, but because such advertising is protected by our verified circulation.

This paper is a member of the Audit Bureau of Circulations, a national, cooperative association of publishers, advertisers and advertising agencies.

The Bureau was organized in 1914. For the protection and information of advertisers, the Bureau's auditors make an annual audit of the circulation records of all publisher members.

This audited information is issued in A. B. C. reports which show how many copies are printed, where they go and many other facts the advertiser should know about the newspaper in which he spends money for advertising.

Just as known standards of quality, weight and measures exist for merchandise, so recognized standards exist for circulation values. These are found only in reports issued by the Audit Bureau of Circulations. Serving both readers and merchants, advertising in this newspaper is a dependable guide to the point of sale.

A Who-Done-It Drama: And Sheriff Finds Out

FORT COLLINS, Colo. (AP)—Riddle: If a woman has a chicken pen that is tightly fenced and locked how can thieves get in to steal the chicks?

Deputy Sheriff Ray Barger was summoned by Mrs. Carl D. Johnson after she studied that riddle for days. The officer scanned all the evidence and then pointed his finger at—a rat. It had been carrying the chicks out through a chimney.

Success at Her Finger Tips

ST. LOUIS — Miss Iddy Ijams has proved there's a new occupation for the blind — telephone switchboard operator.

Her switchboard utilizes braille characters that may be read with the finger tips. Fellow employes say they can't recall that Miss Ijams ever gave a wrong number.

A braille boad is beside her switchboad. With each group of raised characters is a peg that pops up when the buzzer indicates a call.

The peg and raised character indicate incoming, outgoing or disconnect signals. Holes on the regular switchboard are numbered correspondingly, so the operator may identify them by touch.

The braille characters take the place of the colored lights on ordinary switchboards.

"It's simple," says Miss Ijams. "It is a line of work that is practical and available to the sightless."

She has trained several other girls on the braille board and her employer, operator of a stove and range firm, says they all have been very efficient.

Pep Up Scalp To Save Locks

By HELEN FOLLETT

SCALP MASSAGE, therapeutic lamps, the violet ray and the vibrator are first aids to a glorious crown that seems bent on flying away on the winds of heaven. The purpose of all of these beautifying means is to get the blood streams galloping. It is their business to supply the silky shafts with nourishment. If they soldier on the job the silky threads starve to death.

Women who fling money in the cause of good appearance make it a practice to take a course of scalp treatments three times a year. Unlike the members of the big strong growly sex, they don't wait until the hair gets thin. They keep right at the job of preserving their brain fur.

Brush It Hard

If the beauty budget will not permit professional care, make it a regular habit to brush the hair vigorously, to give the scalp a brisk clawing. Spread out fingers and thumbs and move the flesh about. Work hard along the nape. Do litttle circles at the temples. Pinch the flesh along the forward hair line.

When brushing, take the hair strand by strand, holding each one away from the head, start at the scalp, continuing along with a rolling motion. Taking up little wads of hair and pulling in jerks gives exercise to the follicles.

Those new purple-red and mahogany shades that have come into the fashion picture kick up terrible fusses with makeup. Fuchsia is a trying color, too; no woman with a sallow skin should wear it.

With all these colors, a fairly dark complexion powder should be used, as dark and creamy as the complexion will accept. Raspberry lipstick will prove agreeable with purple-red; nasturtium will be acceptable to the mahogany frock. Green fabrics take a lighter powder and a subdued damask lipstick. Wear your new frock, visit a makeup bar where an expert will give you advice. That's the best way.

They Know Farming, If They Don't Know Art

MITCHELL, S. D. (AP) — South Dakotans like their arts straight, so Davison county commissioners junked $300 worth of murals over the courthouse entrance. Practical farmers ridiculed the decorations out.

Flood Waters Are Receding

Two Highways in Southern West Virginia Are under Water

CHARLESTON, W. VA., June 27 (AP)—Flood waters receded from one Southern West Virginia highway tonight but the State Road Commission predicted two others would remain blocked and possibly until tomorrow.

Little damage was reported, however, as a result of heavy rains which swelled streams over most sections of the state.

Traffic was permitted on U. S. 60 through Rainelle during the afternoon as Meadow river went back into its banks. There had been four feet of water over the highway, blocking it for the second time in six years.

U. S. 21 was closed to traffic by the Pocataligo river at Sissonville, Kanawha county, and two places in Jackson county while U. S. 118 was blocked by the Big Sandy North of Clendenin.

Commission employes also reopened a bridge over Guyan creek on State Route 2 at the Cabell-Mason county line. A truck went through the bridge during the morning, but pulled out without damage to the vehicle.

A two-inch rain in the upper reaches of the Kanawha river brought a rise of four feet at Marmet dam and two above normal at Charleston.

The capital, with a record of rain on 19 of June's 27 days, showed a total rainfall for the month of 6.72 inches. The all-time June record for the city was 8.06 inches, set in 1929.

An hour-long storm kept the town of Clendenin, near Charleston, swamped for much of the morning as the water poured down from surrounding hills, blocking culverts and sewers with rocks and brush. The Baltimore and Ohio railroad tracks were flooded the full length of the town, automobile traffic was stopped and extensive damage to gardens was reported.

The U. S. Weather Bureau at Parkersburg said the steady June rains have prevented proper cultivation of crops and caused hay to spoil before it could be harvested. Vegetable crops are from ten days to two weeks late.

CHARLESTON, June 27 (AP)—The condition of P. D. Shingleton formerly was superintendent of the West Virginia State Police.

Seek Injunction To Prevent Enforcement of West Virginia Statute

CHARLESTON, W. Va., June 27 (AP)—An injunction to prevent enforcement of a law which would bar double-decker vehicles from state roads after July 1 was sought today by automobile truckers who declared it discriminatory.

Circuit Judge Julian F. Bouchelle took the petition of five trucking concerns and the West Virginia Automobile Dealers' Association under advisement, and indicated he would rule tomorrow. The law was passed by the 1939 legislature.

The trucks contending the law is unconstitutional, asserted that it discriminates against them by permitting use of such trucks for construction and maintenance of roads, for development of power, coal, oil and gas, and for agricultural purposes.

They also said the law would interfere with interstate commerce, and that it would serve no useful purpose.

The West Virginia Railroad Association, appearing in opposition contended that the questions raised were settled earlier this year by the Unitd States Supreme Court which ruled in a Pennsylvania case that a state had power to enforce a similar law.

Attorney General Clarence Meadows appeared for himself, for Road Commissioner Burr H. Simpson and for Superintendent C. C. Tallmon of the Department of Public Safety, against whom the injunctive action was directed.

The trucking concerns petitioning were Darnell Trucking Company, Inc., Buchannon; Contract Cartage Company, Pontiac, Mich.; Gate City Transport Company, Detroit, Mich.; J. W. Propst, Jr., Inc., Concord, N. C., and White Star Transit Company, Detroit.

Grown-ups are always celebrating anniversaries, so let the kids have this one: This year is the one-hundredth anniversary of the soda fountain!

The first clumsy contraption has developed into a glittering array of chronium and mirrors and there are some 130,000 of them in operation. Trade sources say $600,000,000 was spent at soda fountains last year. Two Virginians patented a soda fountain in 1833 but it was not until it got into public operation.

And though they're still called soda fountains, you no longer get soda out of them. Now water is aerated artificially, but before that process was perfected soda—real baking soda—was used to make the drinks fizz.

Defense Taxes To Boost Prices In West Virginia

Liquor Commission Will Raise Prices in State Stores July 1

CHARLESTON, W. Va., June 27 (AP)—Federal defense taxes will raise the state store prices of liquor an average of 11.11 per cent on July 1, the Liquor Control Commission announced today.

The commission, releasing its July price lists, said the first month's prices are estimated and predicted "some slight downward revisions on particular items" when a more precise price list is prepared for August.

The price boost was one of a number faced by West Virginians as the effective date of the new tax bill, signed this week by President Roosevelt, approached.

Business circles lacked definite announcements, however, as to how many of the taxes will be absorbed by dealers and how many will be passed along.

Theater owners agreed they probably" will pass along to purchasers the ten per cent tax on any ticket costing more than twenty cents. Tax on twenty-five and thirty cent tickets will be three cents; and on thirty-five and forty cent tickets four cents.

Ten-cent beer may be subject to a tax increase of about a cent a bottle.

Gasoline prices will be boosted one-half-cent a gallon Sunday at Midnight. Dealers may absorb the slight increase tax on lubracating oils, they indicated.

Half a cent is added to the tax on a package of cigarettes, and it is up to individual retailers to decide whether they or the smokers will pay it.

Success at Her Finger Tips

ST. LOUIS — Miss Iddy Ijams has proved there's a new occupation for the blind — telephone switchboard operator.

Her switchboard utilizes braille characters that may be read with the finger tips. Fellow employes say they can't recall that Miss Ijams ever gave a wrong number.

A braille boad is beside her switchboad. With each group of raised characters is a peg that pops up when the buzzer indicates a call.

The peg and raised character indicate incoming, outgoing or disconnect signals. Holes on the regular switchboard are numbered correspondingly, so the operator may identify them by touch.

The braille characters take the place of the colored lights on ordinary switchboards.

"It's simple," says Miss Ijams. "It is a line of work that is practical and available to the sightless."

She has trained several other girls on the braille board and her employer, operator of a stove and range firm, says they all have been very efficient.

Pep Up Scalp To Save Locks

By HELEN FOLLETT

SCALP MASSAGE, therapeutic lamps, the violet ray and the vibrator are first aids to a glorious crown that seems bent on flying away on the winds of heaven. The purpose of all of these beautifying means is to get the blood streams galloping. It is their business to supply the silky shafts with nourishment. If they soldier on the job the silky threads starve to death.

Women who fling money in the cause of good appearance make it a practice to take a course of scalp treatments three times a year. Unlike the members of the big strong growly sex, they don't wait until the hair gets thin. They keep right at the job of preserving their brain fur.

Brush It Hard

If the beauty budget will not permit professional care, make it a regular habit to brush the hair vigorously, to give the scalp a brisk clawing. Spread out fingers and thumbs and move the flesh about. Work hard along the nape. Do little circles at the temples. Pinch the flesh along the forward hair line.

When brushing, take the hair strand by strand, holding each one away from the head, start at the scalp, continuing along with a rolling motion. Taking up little wads of hair and pulling in jerks gives exercise to the follicles.

Those new purple-red and mahogany shades that have come into the fashion picture kick up terrible fusses with makeup. Fuchsia is a trying color, too; no woman with a sallow skin should wear it.

With all these colors, a fairly dark complexion powder should be used, as dark and creamy as the complexion will accept. Raspberry lipstick will prove agreeable with purple-red; nasturtium will be acceptable to the mahogany frock. Green fabrics take a lighter powder and a subdued damask lipstick. Wear your new frock, visit a makeup bar where an expert will give you advice. That's the best way.

Jewelry Takes Off Weight To Join Summer's Styles

By AMY PORTER
AP Fashion Writer

Junk jewelry has taken a new lease on life.

That's because novelty manufacturers are doing a good job at creating new and different trinkets especially suitable to wear with summer clothes, and as different from the heavy jewelry of other seasons as a ski suit is different from a bathing suit.

The very newest summer jewery has a wintry look. It simulates icicles, snowflakes, the frost on a window pane. It is made of glass or of featherweight plastics. It looks cool, feels cool and is exactly right to wear with frothy summer dresses.

With sports things, you might wear lightweight plastic beads in white, pink or blue. Amber pieces worked in two colors, pale yellow and brown, look smart against summer's linen-colored suits.

Carved coral, another lightweight novelty, lends a sweet touch of color to white summer frocks. Imitation pearls, of course, are always with us, and pale pink ones compete for favor with regulation white.

Stores rejoice at the popularity of new jewelry. Where before most summer jewelry business was done on sale-priced winter items, now there's something really distinctive to offer the customer for summer. Spring sales show a one-third increase over last year, and summer sales promise to be even better.

The only drawback is that new designs are copied so quickly and offered for sale in ten-cent stores. That is what has happened to the very attractive "crocheted" white plastic necklaces. A few weeks after they appeared in higher-priced stores, the ten-cent stores had some that looked as pretty, though, of course, they were not so durable.

One reason for the increase in the output of glass jewelry—you'll see it everywhere now—is that many skilled glass workers have come to this country from Germany and Czechoslovakia, so that, for the first time, manufacturers can depend on domestic glass instead of having to import it. Glass firms say their business has doubled since Germany took over Czechoslovakia.

The icicle necklace and bracelet set is part of a group of Northern Lights jewelry created by Lisanda for wear with summer fashions. Other necklaces use twice as many glass snowdrops and icicles to achieve a bib effect. Sometimes a touch of green glass is used with the crystal for a cool mint-julep look. Glass jewels are inexpensive, extremely popular—and breakable.

Paul Huhn's German father started training him to work with glass when he was 13. Making the pulled glass leaf shown here is child's play compared to more intricate blowing and molding.

Railway Plans Spending Eight Million Dollars For Improvements

ROANOKE, June 27 (AP)—Officials of the Norfolk and Western has announced that the railway will "proceed immediately" with a new $8,000,000 improvement program, an addition to the $20,000,000 construction and improvement program for 1940 announced early in December.

Included in this new program is the purchase of 25,000 tons of 131-pound steel rail and fastenings, 1,000 new fifty-five ton hopper coal cars, 500 forty-feet box cars and 250 fifty-feet box cars.

Virginia Cuts Cost Of Fair Exhibit

CHARLESTON, W. Va., June 26 (AP)—Thanks to reduced rentals, West Virginia has cut materially the cost of operations in its New York World's Fair exhibit this year.

Rentals were cut to one-fourth, and the $15,000 (less $1,200 for prompt payment) spent for that item last year has been reduced to $3,700.

Other operating expenses remain about the same despite the addition of one more salaried employe. Paul Morgan of Charleston, student in a New York art school, has been employed in place of one of the four changing employes who work for only two weeks at a time without pay cut with payment of expenses.

Morgan has proved his worth, officials declared. He has helped brighten and refurnish parts of the exhibit. Knowing something of electricity he has been able to repair working parts of the diaramas—in a way many persons couldn't do.

A small youth, he has been able to crowd behind the scenes without removing them and get to the cause of the trouble.

Egypt had the highest death rate, before the present war, of any country in the world.

Old-Fashioned Mother-in-Law Is About Extinct

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX, Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage — Distributed by King Features Syndicate, Inc.

What's that old saw about giving a dog a bad name and you'll hang him? That seems to have been the case with the mother-in-law—that reliable household standby.

That dreadful name, the butt of stupid jests, seems to have settled an important family relationship in advance. A splendid idea, that—of mothers-in-law getting together for an agreeable social roundup once a year in New York, and, while they were about it, giving themselves a new name.

The comic supplement mother-in-law seems to have gone the way of the kerosene lamp, the corner pump, and the horse car. Doubtless she did exist, but I never happened to meet her. All the mothers-in-law with whom I have been acquainted seemed to be engaged in making life more pleasant for the boys and girls their sons and daughters married, staying home with the baby when the young people wanted to go to the movie, and more often than not taking over a little of the family darning.

Practically Extinct

The dreadful lugubrious kind of mother-in-law, whose idea of fun and frolic was to visit the cemetery, or indulge in a good cry over the creatures her offspring had married, has become practically extinct.

"Adjustment" seems to have been the word which has greeted the happy magic of the older and younger generation getting along together, even if they have to live under one roof. A sensible girl, if she is going to live in the same house with her mother-in-law, doesn't go into the new home with a chip on her shoulder. And a mother-in-law sensibly kisses goodbye to the way things were done in her day.

If there are children in the family, and a mother-in-law has successfully reared seven of her own, she never mentions how the miracle came about, unless urged to do so by her daughter-in-law.

Pacifiers! Purgatives! Paregoric! The up-to-date mother-in-law knows these things are anathema, especially the pacifier, that dirty, germ-laden substitute which was shoved into a baby's mouth to keep it quiet, and more often than not, by pressing unduly against the upper gums, produced buck teeth.

Harder Role

The mother-in-law role is the harder than that of the wife; she knows if she doesn't make all the bases, she is more than likely to lose the love of her own children.

The truly tragic figure of an in-law is he or she who must share an unwelcome roof with son or daughter. The case is particularly cruel when these old parents, often at the repeated insistence of their children, sell their own homes, their household goods, and dispose of whatever little assets they may have, to come to live with their children, only to find themselves regarded as a burden.

I've had hundreds of letters from such pitiful old people, and I often wonder what's going to happen to their grudging, selfish children when they become in-laws.

It's a risky arrangement—that of two women under the same roof, but it's not an impossible arrangement, if it can be managed with tact, judgment and, above all, with a sense of humor.

Contour Planting Conserves Soil, Water

DIXON, Ill. (AP)—Approximately 400 acres of corn in Ogle county were planted on the contour this year to conserve soil and water on sloping farm land.

Contour planting, the opposite of drilling up and down hills, was devised to retain moisture in good soil on cultivated fields, and to prevent killing grass on bottom pastures.

F. F. Coffman, one of the farmers experimenting with the planting method, said that heretofore pasture fields below his cultivated land were covered with water and silt after each big rain, but that this year the heavy rains carried off very little soil.

AFL Leader Urges Nation To Outlaw Communists And Nazi Bund

NEW YORK, June 27 (AP)—President William Green, of the American Federation of Labor accuses Germany and Russia of "financing, directing and encouraging organized treachery" in the United States and South America and urged the nation, therefore, to outlaw the Communist party and the Nazi bund.

"The time has come for us to identify the traitors in our midst," Green told approximately 1,500 guests at a testimonial dinner for the labor leader. "There is no more sense in extending civil liberties to a 'fifth column' movement than in inviting a murderer into our house and handing him a gun with which to shoot us."

It was the first step taken by the A. M. A. committee on medical preparedness, created at the association's recent convention in New York.

Late News Events As Pictured by the Cameramen

James Forrestal

President of Dillon, Read & Co., New York investment bankers, James Forrestal was named a presidential assistant by President Roosevelt and is expected to play an important role in the national defense program.

This is how the convention hall in Philadelphia looked on the eve of the Republican national convention opening — everything in readiness even to the flag-bearing elephants atop state banners. The view was taken from the convention floor looking toward the speakers' platform, showing where state delegations will be located.

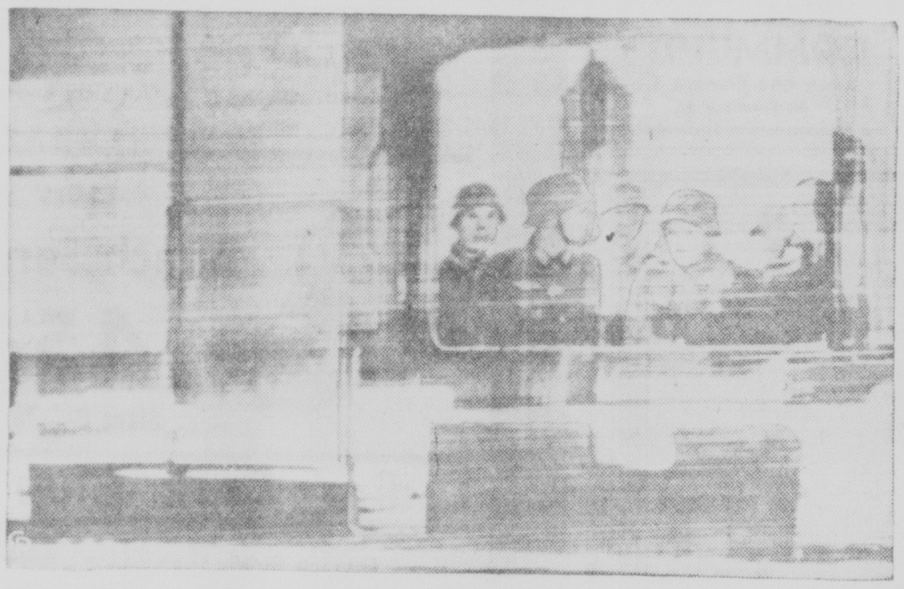

Radioed from Berlin to New York, this picture shows, the German censor said, the wreckage of a house in suburban Berlin after British bombers raided "non-military targets" and caused injury to "three women and one child." It was the first air raid of the war to strike directly at the German capital.

Just to emphasize the point that the hand is quicker than the eye, Senator H. Styles Bridges, New Hampshire's GOP presidential prospect, removed his coat and worked in shirtsleeves while doing his favorite coin trick before an audience of newspapermen. The exhibition took place at Bridges' press conference in Philadelphia on the eve of the opening of the Republican national convention.

Waving his hat in greeting, Governor Raymond E. Baldwin leads the way as Connecticut delegate to the Republican national convention leave the railroad station for their headquarters in Philadelphia. This is a phonephoto.

German soldiers are shown in this radiophoto as they peered curiously through a window into the historic railroad car at Compiegne, France, where the 1918 armistice was signed and where German and French leaders met to discuss terms of the 1940 armistice. The picture was taken through a window on the opposite side of the car from the one through which the soldiers are looking.

This scene was recorded during the tense hour when the U. S. liner Washington was halted by a submarine off the coast of Portugal. The German commander signaled to clear ship and the lifeboats were being loaded before the order was given to proceed. In the foreground is a woman carrying a baby.

These photographs were taken inside the Ford plant at River Rouge, Mich., and show the mechanical facilities which can be utilized within six months to produce 1,000 Army pursuit planes a day. Top, is a small part of the gigantic tool and die plant, one of the largest industrial units in the world. Once the dies and tools are made, mass production starts. Bottom, left, two men working at a lathe. Bottom right, a grey-haired mechanic whose long experience making automobile parts can be utilized to make good airplanes.

Enroute to the "fuehrer house" in Adolf Hitler's favorite city of Munich to discuss terms of surrender to be offered France, the German leader, right, unsmiling and tired, and jutting-jawed Benito Mussolini, left, are shown as they drove through streets bedecked with Italian and German flags and jammed with cheering onlookers. It was the first meeting of the two dictators since Italy made its entry into the war a few days before the French government offered to capitulate.

This is how the convention hall in Philadelphia looked on the eve of the Republican national convention opening — everything in readiness even to the flag-bearing elephants atop state banners. This view was taken from the convention floor looking toward the speakers' platform, showing where state delegations will be located.

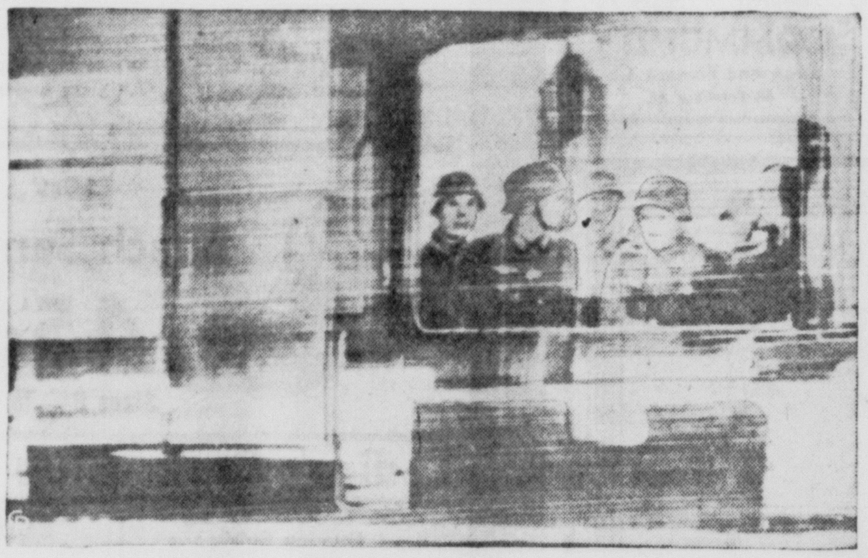

Radioed from Berlin to New York, this picture shows, the German censor said, the wreckage of a house in suburban Berlin after British bombers raided "non-military targets" and caused injury to "three women and one child." It was the first air raid of the war to strike directly at the German capital.

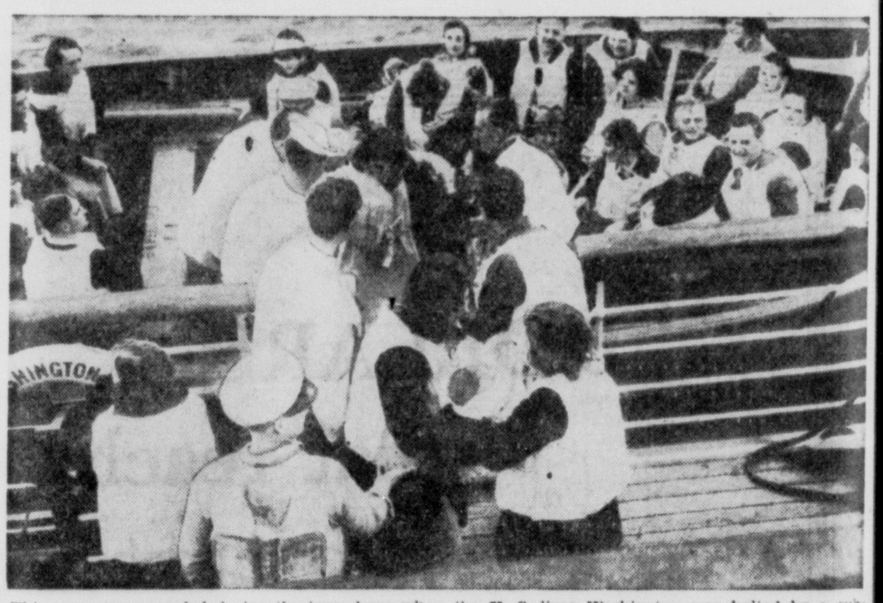

Just to emphasize the point that the hand is quicker than the eye, Senator H. Styles Bridges, New Hampshire's GOP presidential prospect, removed his coat and worked in shirtsleeves while doing his favorite coin trick before an audience of newspapermen. The exhibition took place at Bridges' press conference in Philadelphia on the eve of the opening of the Republican national convention.

Waving his hat in greeting, Governor Raymond E. Baldwin leads the way as Connecticut delegates to the Republican national convention leave the railroad station for their headquarters in Philadelphia. This is a phonephoto.

German soldiers are shown in this radiophoto as they peered curiously through a window into the historic railroad car at Compiegne, France, where the 1918 armistice was signed and where German and French leaders met to discuss terms of the 1940 armistice. The picture was taken through a window on the opposite side of the car from the one through which the soldiers are looking.

This scene was recorded during the tense hour when the U. S. liner Washington was halted by a submarine off the coast of Portugal. The German commander signaled to clear ship and the lifeboats were being loaded before the order was given to proceed. In the foreground is a woman carrying a baby.

These photographs were taken inside the Ford plant at River Rouge, Mich., and show the mechanical facilities which can be utilized within six months to produce 1,000 Army pursuit planes a day. Top, is a small part of the gigantic tool and die plant, one of the largest industrial units in the world. Once the dies and tools are made, mass production starts. Bottom, left, two men working at a lathe. Bottom right, a grey-haired mechanic whose long experience making automobile parts can be utilized to make good airplanes.

Enroute to the "fuehrer house" in Adolf Hitler's favorite city of Munich to discuss terms of surrender to be offered France, the German leader, right, unsmiling and tired, and jutting-jawed Benito Mussolini, left, are shown as they drove through streets bedecked with Italian and German flags and jammed with cheering onlookers. It was the first meeting of the two dictators since Italy made its entry into the war a few days before the French government offered to capitulate.

PUTTING THE CANAL ZONE ON WAR FOOTING

In a sudden move to tighten Panama Canal defenses, 30,000 U. S. troops in the zone have been placed "on alert" in extensive maneuvers and mine fields have been laid at the canal entrances. Here is an air view of the vital Gatun Locks and a section of the canal as a protective squadron of navy planes roars overhead. Inset is Brig. Gen. Sanderford Jarman, commander of the zone's coast artillery, who has rushed his big railroad guns from the Pacific to the Atlantic side of the canal.

Willkie's drive for the presidency began only a few weeks ago.. His record as a battler against the New Deal, his bluff, homespun manner, and his way of dealing with people attracted attention to him at once. So rapid was his rise, that although he came to Philadelphia with only a small minority of delegates pledged to him, his secondary strength was obviously enormous as was revealed on last night's successive ballots.

He is president of Commonwealth and Southern Corporation, huge electric utilities holding company, and the utilities issue was raised against him. It was argued that that issue would be brought up in the campaign to come. Some leaders of the party were against him, feeling that an older party member should have the nomination and recalling that Willkie was a registered Democrat as recently as 1932.

DEWEY FADES QUICKLY

But once the ball started rolling tonight, there was little doubt of the outcome. Dewey faded out of the picture like a morning-glory at high noon.. For a moment a two man Taft-Willkie contest was in the making, but the utilities man and his supporters forged straight ahead and were not to be denied.

Willkie received word of his nomination in his sixteenth floor hotel suite surrounded by pushing, cheering crowds.

Hair tousled and necktie awry, the nominee sat smiling broadly as he heard the returs come in over the radio.

He appeared somewhat dazed by the victory he had confidently predicted it.

His confidence had waned somewhat when Taft made gains on the fifth ballot. He commented then:

"Well, it looks as if it might be either of us. Should he win we can say that at least we stirred him."

The official result of the fifth ballot was Willkie 429; and Taft 329, with the rest scattered.

The New York utilities man, starting off at 105 showed such remarkable powers of growth as the balloting proceeded that many delegates were speculating on the possibility of his nomination on the next, the sixth ballot.

PHILADELPHIA, June 28, (Friday)—(AP)—Wendell Willkie received word of his nomination for the presidency in the sixteenth floor hotel suite of his headquaters where he was surrounded by a pushing, cheering crowd.

Seated on a sofa before a radio the forty-eight old utilities executive smiled broadly, though his strained face showed the effects of a hectic eight-weeks campaign.

Mrs. Willkie, located at another hotel, tried frantically to get in touch with her husband by telephone to offer congratulations, but was unsuccessful as a crowd surged about to felicitate him.

The crowd, packed deep in the small reception room of his headquaters, became so boisterous that police were called in to help preserve orded.

His hair tousled and his necktie awry, Willkie appeared somewhat dazed by the victory which he had confidently predicted.

From the beginning of the balloting he had remained in his suite which was open to the public. Occasionaly on the call of assistants, he would rush to one of the telephones in adjoining rooms to discuss floor strategy with his floor manager, Governor Harold E. Stassen of Minnesota.

Tensely he smoked one cigarette after another. He seemed to enjoy remarks of Taft supporters who, in announcing votes on the convention floor, said they wanted to cast their ballots for a "real Republican."

"They have used the argument too much," he said. "It is working against Mr. Taft."

demands was merely a formal way of stating that consent, official quarters disclosed.

Strengthen Transylvania

Foreign military attaches were advised however that most of Rumania's armed forces were enroute to Transylvania. They were bolstered by truckloads and plane loads of reservists called to the colors only today by Rumania.

She had invoked a virtually general mobilization while the grand council considered Russia's demands, first accepted them in principle, pleaded unavailingly for time to dicker and finally capitulated.

Tonight's decision disposes only of Russia's claims. Now will come Hungary, with the reported backing of Adolph Hitler, to ask for Transylvania. Bulgaria, a friend of Russia, may seek the return of southern Dobruja.

All told, Rumania stands to lose nearly half of her 113,884 square miles and return to Balkan obscurity—a satellite wavering between the gravitational pulls of the Axis powers in the west and the Red empire in the east.

Amid reoprts that Red warplanes were darkening the horizon and that Red troops, tanks and artillery were massing at her frontier, Rumania's grand council, under the presidency of the 46-year-old King Carol II, gave reluctant consent to demands which authoritative sources outlined as follows:

Once Russian Territory

Return of Bessarabia, 17,146 square miles of fertile country, inhabited by more than 3,000,000 persons, which once was part of the Czarist Russian empire and to which Red Russia never formally renounced her claim;

Cession of the northern part of Bucovina province, once part of the Austro-Hungarian empire, but how much of Bucovina's 4,030 square miles and 911,000 inhabitants Russia wanted was not known;

Control of Rumania's big Black Sea port, Constanta, as a Red naval base;

Supervision of Galati and Braila, two Rumanian ports controlling all navigation on the Danube, one of Germany's principal lifelines, and;

Railway bases at certain Rumanian ports along with certain other incidental concessions. (Reports to Berlin said "control" of Tulcea, another Danube port, also was demanded.)

While Rumania still pleaded for time to dicker, gendarmes went from house to house, farm to farm and factory to factory calling up Rumanian reservists; planes patrolled the Bucharest airport, and anti-aircraft guns were mounted on the capital's tall buildings.

But, so far as Russia was concerned, this was only a precautionary gesture.

Unrelenting on her ultimatum, Russia won Rumanian concessions apparently without firing a shot.

To Resist Hungary

As regards Hungary and her demands for 24,020-square-mile Transylvania, there was a show of resistance. It was learned officially that Rumanian troops were being concentrated in Transylvania, near the Hungarian fronti r.

Official quarters expressed belief that King Carol had decided to grant all Russia's requests in order to be able to throw all his 1,500,000 armed men against the expected Hungarian attempt to regain Transylvania.

Bulgaria's claim on the southern part of 8,979-square-mile Dobruja remained a more undetermined factor in Rumania's future. There was no sign of extraordinary military activity in Bulgaria—or Hungary, for that matter—but foreign observers pointed out that both have strong forces on their borders with Rumania.

Responsible Bulgarian sources at Sofia expressed belief that Russia's success was the long-awaited opening wedge for remaking the Balkan map.

A Bulgarian army of 250,000 remained on the Turkish frontier, in apparent preoccupation over Turkish aims rather than the winning of historic Dobruja claim against Rumania.

Three Drowned As Boat Capsizes in Ohio River

CINCINNATI, June 27 (AP)—Two young women and a girl drowned in the Ohio river today when a small boat occupied by a party of six capsized.

The women were Mrs. Joan Flowers, 29, and Mrs. Katherine Flowers, 19. The girl was tentatively identified as Eleanor Weiss, 13.

The bodies were recovered.

Edward Flowers, 22, Katherine's husband, was pulled from the river a half mile downstream and revived by a life saving squad.

Ronald Flowers, 21, Joan's husband, saved the four-months-old daughter of his brother, Edward.

Police said Roland told of grabbing both his wife and the child. But unable to carry both of them he released Joan because she was a good swimmer and made his way to a scow with the child.

Edward was reported to have struggled to save his wife but became exhausted.

The party was enroute to a Kentucky beach.

Advice to the Lovelorn

Cinderella Stepfather

Dear Miss Fairfax:

My first husband was killed in a motor accident, the second year of our marriage. As much for my little son's happiness as my own, I married two years later because I felt it would be better if my boy had a father's influence. My fiance seemed devoted to the child and would take him out on all sorts of pleasure jaunts.

A year after my second marriage, we had a boy, and all my husband's affection for my child seemed to turn to dislike if not positive hatred.

I never dreamed of such depths of cruelty in anyone as my husband shows for his stepson. The boys are bigger now, and he will cruelly whip my child before his half-brother for no valid reason that I could see. My own boy's fine disposition is beginning to break under this treatment, and the younger boy is becoming spoiled, hard, and unfair, constantly telling tales on his half-brother.

I hardly know what step to take, though I am capable of supporting myself. It seems to me than as a decent type of mother I cannot see the characters of two boys spoiled by the overindulgence on one hand nd cruelty on the other hand, to which these boys are submitted. My husband insists on the sole custody of his son, if I divorce him.

DISTRAUGHT MOTHER

A psychiatrist would have some very unpleasant facts to hand out concerning your husband's unkind treatment of his stepson, while he spoils his own child to the degree you state. Cinderella step-parents do not realize they are abnormal, and in all probability would decline to take the necessary mental treatment. The law, however, puts a limit on the "discipline," as they call it, to which a child may be submitted, and I would advise you to consult a lawyer or the Legal Aid Society.

If your home were broken up, it is not unlikely that any fair judge of a juvenile court would award you the custody of your younger son, in which case his father would be permitted to see him only at stated intervals. Such a consideration might be a deterent to whipping one child "for no good reason," as you state, but for the gratification of the other child.

I should be glad to hear what my readers have to say about this case.

Daughter a Problem

Dear Miss Fairfax:

My 18-year-old daughter is causing us a real problem just now. When in high school she had a boy friend who came to the house for more than a year, and my husband and I liked him. Then one evening our daughter had a date with another boy, and this first boy parked in front of the house until my husband ordered him to stop spying and he promised to go home.

Now my husband has forbidden her to see him any more, and won't allow her to talk to him, although he keeps on calling on the phone, and he comes around almost every evening and whistles for her and is very annoying. She won't speak to us at all since this happened. We would be thankful to you, Miss Fairfax, if you could tell in the right thing to do about this matter.

A MOTHER

To my way of thinking you are making too much of the "puppy-love" case of this youth of 19 and your daughter. There is nothing like opposition for making a passing love affair serious. To have aroused your daughter's antagonism to the point where she refuses to speak to you is unfortunate. If I were dealing with such an affair, I'd try to laugh it off.

Terms call for surrender of the French fleet, but most of it was reported in eastern Mediterranean (3) with the British fleet. ## Maureen O'Hara Is Featured at Liberty

Maureen O'Hara, 19-year-old Irish girl, has the leading role in "A Bill of Divorcement," starting tomorrow at the New Liberty theater She shares honors with Adolphe Menjou, Fay Bainter and Herbert Marshall.

Although Miss O'Hara has made only two previous pictures, she is far from being an inexperienced actress. She was trained from childhood at the famous Abbey Theater school in Dublin and in addition, was coached by her mother, Rita Fitz Simmons, who was a member of the Abbey Players.

Her talent stood out so definitely that the directorate of the theater sought a wider field for her endeavors. She was screen-tested and the test sent to London. So impressed were Charles Laughton and Erich Pommer, joint owners of Mayflower Productions, that they immediately sent for her. The result was the leading role in "Jamaica Inn," the Laughton starring picture then about to go into production, and a long term contract. Now, RKO Radio Pictures has an option on her services.

Cisco Western Is Strand Feature

A mystery-killer steals the Cisco Kid's name, a two-gun terror beats him to the draw, the sheriff gets the noose around his neck and a jealous senorita has him at her mercy in "Lucky Cisco Kid," which opens Saturday at the Strand theater.

The film story affords Romero plenty of opportunity to display his versatile talents.

When the Cisco Kid is framed by a crooked judge and hunted by a hundred enemies, there's bound to be thrilling action. When he is mixed up with two beautiful but jealous women, there's sure to be romance.

The cast is headed by blonde and beautiful Mary Beth Hughes, one of the screen's finest young players. Her performance as the siren songstress of an Arizona dance hall is sure to be well received by the audiences. She was an excellent choice for the role.

A bright spot in the feature cast is provided by Dana Andrews, a young and surprisingly natural newcomer. Evelyn Venable, also goves a fine performance.

Chris-Pin Martin, the Cisco Kid's roly poly sidekick, gets himself into all sorts of difficulties and provides plenty of fun throughout the picture.

Through sheer persistence and sales ability, he finally talked his way out of the labratory and into a supporting part in a comedy picture. Directors became interested, and he was soon playing a long list of roles with some of Hollywood's most prominent stars.

Albertson's most standout performance was with Katherine Hepburn in "Alice Adams."

The co-feature at the Garden is "Three Texas Steers," starring John Wayne, Ray Corrigan and Max Terhune.

Packard was active at a minor advance on further reports the company would go into airplane and marine engine building.

Edging upward in the curb were American Cyanamid "B," Electric Bond & Share, Jones and Laughlin, Phoenix Securities and St. Regis Paper. Turnover was around 93,000 shares against 125,000 the day before.

Norfolk, Va., June 27, (AP)—Net income of the Virginian railway during May of this year amounted to $730,473, an increase of $522,109 over the net income for the same month last year, a statement released by the line's auditing department said.

The increase in May this year over that of 1939 was due, according to the release, to a strike of bituminous coal miners during the first fourteen days of May of last year, which affected all of the mines on the Virginian railway, with the exception of three small semi-anthracite mines in Virginia.

LUCKY CISCO

Theaters Today

Maureen O'Hara Is Featured at Liberty

Maureen O'Hara, 19-year-old Irish girl, has the leading role in "A Bill of Divorcement," starting tomorrow at the New Liberty theater. She shares honors with Adolphe Menjou, Fay Bainter and Herbert Marshall.

Although Miss O'Hara has made only two previous pictures, she is far from being an inexperienced actress. She was trained from childhood at the famous Abbey Theater school in Dublin and in addition, was coached by her mother, Rita Fitz Simmons, who was a member of the Abbey Players.

Her talent stood out so definitely that the directorate of the theater sought a wider field for her endeavors. She was screen-tested and the test sent to London. So impressed were Charles Laughton and Erich Pommer, joint owners of Mayflower Productions, that they immediately sent for her. The result was the leading role in "Jamaica Inn," the Laughton starring picture then about to go into production, and a long term contract. Now, RKO Radio Pictures has an option on her services.

Cisco Western Is Strand Feature

A mystery-killer steals the Cisco Kid's name, a two-gun terror beats him to the draw, the sheriff gets the noose around his neck and a jealous senorita has him at her mercy in "Lucky Cisco Kid," which opens Saturday at the Strand theater.

The film story affords Romero plenty of opportunity to display his versatile talents.

When the Cisco Kid is framed by a crooked judge and hunted by a hundred enemies, there's bound to be thrilling action. When he is mixed up with two beautiful but jealous women, there's sure to be romance.

The cast is headed by blonde and beautiful Mary Beth Hughes, one of the screen's finest young players. Her performance as the siren songstress of an Arizona dance hall is sure to be well received by the audiences. She was an excellent choice for the role.

A bright spot in the feature cast is provided by Dana Andrews, a young and surprisingly natural newcomer. Evelyn Venable, also goves a fine performance.

Chris-Pin Martin, the Cisco Kid's roly poly sidekick, gets himself into all sorts of difficulties and provides plenty of fun throughout the picture.

On the stage will be "Broadway on Parade" in which six big high class vaudeville acts will appear. In addition there will be cartoons, comedies and the latest news flashes.

THE UPPER HAND

Raymond Hatton in an action scene from the Republic Production, "Pioneers of the West." Now showing at the Embassy theater.

PRISONER OF WAR

Wallace Beery as he appears on the Maryland screen in "The Man from Dakota," melodrama of a Yankee prisoner of war who escapes from a Confederate prison camp. John Howard and Dolores Del Rio are seen in support of the star.

Albertson Is Featured In Blackmailer Drama

Frank Albertson is featured with Constance Moore and Robert Armstrong in Universal's drama of society blackmailers, "Framed," which opens today at the Garden theater. Jerome Cowan, Sidney Blackmer and Barbara Pepper head the supporting cast.

Albertson's first bit of success as an actor was followed by months of idleness. So Frank took a job as a "prop" boy in a studio and later worked in the film labratory.

Through sheer persistence and sales ability, he finally talked his way out of the labratory and into a supporting part in a comedy picture. Directors became interested, and he was soon playing a long list of roles with some of Hollywood's most prominent stars.

Albertson's most standout performance was with Katherine Hepburn in "Alice Adams."

The co-feature at the Garden is "Three Texas Steers," starring John Wayne, Ray Corrigan and Max Terhune.

Western Feature Is Offered by Embassy

"Pioneers of the West," Republic western scheduled to run at the Embassy theater for two days starting today, promises an exciting sixty minutes of western entertainment.

The Three Mesquiteers, Stony, Rusty and Rico, intervene when a wagon train of western settlers is attacked by Indians. They win the undying esteem of the settlers, headed by Dr. Bailey, who, with his beautiful daughter Anna, has been lured westward by offers of "cheap land."

Reaching their destination, they discover that the land sold them by a group of local politicians, including Judge Platt and Sheriff Gorham, is practically worthless. However, by dint of hard labor and courage, they finally manage to clear it and have reached the point when they are about to make a fair living when they are suddenly beset by exhorbitant taxes.

The second feature is "Music in My Heart," with Tony Martin and Rita Hayworth.

In addition another chapter of "The Shadow" is on the bill.

Wallace Beery Is Featured at Maryland

Wallace Beery, who has made a specialty of combining comedy with the characteristics of a heavy, appears again as Sergeant Barstow, Yankee prisoner of war, "The Man from Dakota," Civil story which opened yesterday

CHAPTER ONE

LINDA HAD SEEN Ronald last on a rainy night, one year ago, at a railroad station. A train was coming and Ronald was taking it.

Now, as she glimpsed him through the smoke-fogged drawing room in a Manhattan penthouse high above the East river, where too many people talked too much and too fast, the cup in her slim hand wobbled.

Tall, browned, lean, moving slowly in his expensive tweeds, Ronald crossed to speak to the hostess. His profile was toward Linda—that profile which had coaxed her eyes away from the movie screen back at Hamilton, Va., because he was so much better looking than cinema men.

Ronald turned and stood quite still. He narrowed his eyes a little, as though someone had told him something he didn't quite believe. Then he smiled, his mouth twisted into the grin she had known since she was ten and he was twelve, and he started toward her.

Linda and Ronald had intended to say goodby quite casually that rainy April night just twelve months ago. She had thought that Ronald would kiss her lightly, as though he were going back to college and would see her at a game or a house party somewhere. After all, it was sort of maudlin to get excited because all of that was over. Ronald's father's estate had yielded nothing but debts, and Ronald needed a job.

Then, as the train slowed down, Ronald put his arms around her. He didn't kiss her. Just stood, clutching her, as though he wanted to miss the train. At last he said:

"I feel—things about you, Linda. You know them. Always remember, won't you?" Then he tried to be gay. "Some night, when my name's news, I'll give you a ring from Singapore or Trieste or the Hoboken ferry!"

He picked up his well-worn pigskin bags, the case which held the trumpet on which he intended to swing to fame, and climbed on the train.

One year before . . . and now he was coming. Not by intention. By accident. And she didn't know how to act. Lots of things could have happened to Ronald in this year which had started with two letters, a card from a ship whose orchestra he had joined, and a cable from London when he landed an obscure place in a famous band. Then he had slipped into strange silence months ago.

Linda steadied her wide green eyes. With conscious effort she sent dark eyebrows and the corners of her red mouth flying upward. She even wrinkled her short, straight nose a little, never guessing the tall young man who was almost in front of her remembered the gesture.

But when Ronald's strong hands closed over hers, her heart became a trapeze that swung madly. She spoke calmly, though.

"Hi, Ronnie! I've been waiting for the telephone to ring." Not one tear tripped her sweet, husky tones.

"I couldn't call, I ran out of nickles," he answered in the mood she had established, but his eyes searched hers. "You aren't the same, Linda. You've changed."

"Wiser, I think," she parried.

"Ronald, Ronald, you could have reversed the charges! Only you wouldn't. You're too independent. There wasn't an hour that I didn't listen for the bell, or watch for the mailman."

Ronald didn't smile when he replied. His gray eyes were serious. "I had your old number, Linda. The one for your 'phone down in Virginia—Center 403. I did call, and they said the telephone was disconnected."

"You did call?" Now her smile was radiant, there were stars in the deep green of her eyes. "You remembered. Why, Ronnie?"

"Because we had a compact," he answered, just as though a year was nothing but the space between two dances or two games. He said the words slowly, gravely, like a prayer you laid by to be remembered.

"You stopped writing so long ago," Linda said. "Where did you go?"

"I stopped writing," he said cheerfully, "because I had nothing to say. A traveling troubadour may pick up news, but it's not likely to interest a girl back home. Then when I did get back three months ago, I heard your Aunt Susan Jennie was married and you had gone out to get some fame. By the way, what do you do?"

"I feel—things about you, Linda. You know them."

It was such a matter-of-fact statement that it broke a spell that had come with the rain, the music, the telephone call to a number that existed only in memory now.

"I'm with the Bagley Models' agency."

"Whew! A girl who poses for magazine covers, stockings, and breakfast food and gadgets! Then the freckles on your nose didn't keep you from anything good? You know, I always liked them. They're gone now." He looked disappointed.

"Have been, Ronnie darling, for four years. Maybe you just don't remember me since I've grown up. But I'm not a model. My features aren't right and I'm not tall enough—I sit at the desk in the reception room and tell the models what to do and initiate the new ones into Mr. Bagley's glamorous presence. But I like it." Then she recalled that she didn't know what Ronald was doing.

"Where did the trumpet take you?" she asked. "You're prosperous, you weigh more, you're happy."

"I'm doing some numbers in a new show that features the band I played with in London. Heard of 'Swing the Chorus'? I've got a contract, and we're going on the air, too, and today, alone, I made two records. Don't you read the music and entertainment notes?"

She did, but she had missed his name. Funny she had not thought that he might be with this band.

"Oh, by the way," Ronald said suddenly, "in the excitement of old home week I lost my girl." He scanned the crowd, smiled at someone, motioned. There was just a moment's pause before he reached out to pull a girl who was approaching into their group.

"Sarah, you've heard me mention Linda Avery," Ronald was saying. "I've found her. Linda, this is Sarah Markley."

Sarah's hair was yellow—yellow as buttercups, country butter, dandelions, Linda was thinking. Why did princesses in fairytales always have yellow hair? Even Little Eva who went to a pasteboard heaven in the last act of the old play had it. Sarah's eyes were blue, cool, serene, confident. She was tall, too, and suddenly Linda felt that her own inches were not adequate.

Linda's head began to ache. What was it Ronald had said? "I lost my girl." And he hadn't meant her, Linda Avery. He had lost her a year ago.

Then Sarah's voice, a lilting carol that wasn't quite sweet, caught Linda's attention.

". . . ever since the day I dropped in at the rehearsal at the theater and heard Ronnie I knew he was headed for the moon. He sends rockets shooting straight up! Glorious red and gold ones. Dad is going to see that he has his own band next season. Did he tell you?"

Ah, now she recognized Sarah Markley. That lovely, provocative face had laughed out at her from photogravures and society pages—at the opera, swimming in Florida, riding in the Horse Show, dining at the Rainbow room. . . . This girl was one of last season's glamorous debutantes. And her father was old Peter Markley, theatrical magnate, whose shows were among Broadway's sell-outs every season. He it was who was sponsoring Ronald's band.

Was she pursuing him? She could have anything she wanted. Or was he drawn by her golden witchery? Was it transient? Would it last? After all, Ronnie never before had known a glamor girl.

Sarah was talking again. ". . . so I'm having a party and Ronnie is playing for some very special friends. You'll come, won't you? Tomorrow night. And bring any nice young man you want to, because we may go on to Twenty-One or somewhere."

Bring any nice young man you want to . . . because Ronald is mine. Linda caught the meaning of the words and knew that the tall young trumpeter didn't.

They left soon after and Linda followed. She saw a long car leaving the curb as she came out of the door. Maybe Sarah had one. Maybe Ronald was prospering beyond her belief.

Linda climbed into a taxicab, a luxury she usually spurned, and sank down on the hard leather cushions, tired, heartsick, homesick.

At the old-fashioned house, lately renovated, where she had an apartment, she slipped her key into the door. Suddenly a man's voice, low, amused, yet desperate, spoke commandingly.

"I'll give you half my kingdom if you'll let me in. Please! Just for five minutes—even three!"

Success of State Income Tax Hinges on Eyes Of Auditors

Baltimore, June 27 (AP)—Success or failure of Maryland's new income tax, so far as attaining its $8,000,000 goal was concerned, apparently hinged on the eagle eyes of the State Treasury department's auditors.

Officials disclosed additional assessments, made against taxpayers who failed to remit all of the tax required on their incomes, would tell the tale.

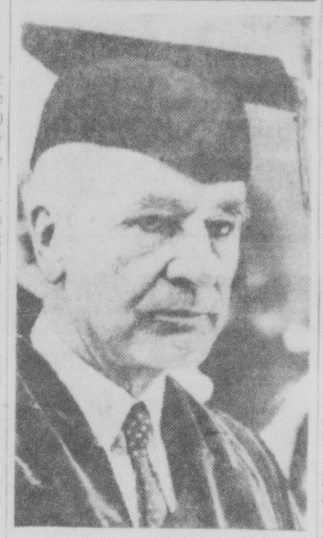

To date, the income levy has turned some $7,400,000 into the treasury. Another $150,000 to $200,000 is definitely in sight, officials said, leaving a gap of about $400,000 to be closed to reach the $8,000,000 figure.

Auditors must examine about 100,000 taxable returns, they explained and the $400,000—if it is obtained—must be found in the additional assessments made as a result of the audit.

'Walked Out' His Fine

Wooden Check Taken Without Question

MANHATTAN, Kas. (AP)—When a plasterer completed a job at C. W. Mullen's home he figured his bill on a small board and handed it to Mullen.

Mullen simply turned it over, and then wrote a check on the other side. The plasterer took the board to the bank, shoved it through the teller's window and the teller paid without lifting an eyebrow.

TODAY'S GARDENGRAPH

By DEAN HALLIDAY

(Distributed by Central Press Association)

Many amateur horticulturists enjoy collecting seeds from choice flowers in their own gardens. When seed collecting is planned the smaller blossoms should be removed from selected plants. This enables these plants to throw all their energy into the formation of seeds on the remaining blossoms. Seeds should be taken only from the best blossoms.

One very good method of collecting seeds is to cover the flower heads with a glassine bag, as shown in the accompanying Garden-Graph. The bag will keep birds away from the seeds, and also prevent the seeds from falling to the ground, or being blown away by winds. If the seeds drop they are caught and held by the bag.

As a general rule it is best to sow perennial seeds as soon as they have ripened. It should be remembered, however, that seeds collected in the home garden often do not come true to color, due to cross-pollinization.

Only in the Tar and Neuse rivers of North Carolina are found a species of striped catfish, which are never over four inches long.

Fitzpatrick Still Busy

HUNTINGTON, W. Va., June 26 (AP)—Herbert Fitzpatrick has retired as chairman of the board and vice-president-law of the Chesapeake & Ohio Railway Co., but he still has plenty to do to keep busy:

He was recently elected rector of Washington & Lee University at Lexington, Va., his alma mater, and will spend part of each month there discharging new tasks;

He retains his active membership, and will spend much time at his desk, in the law firm of Fitzpatrick, Brown and Davis, in Huntington;

He has disclosed he will conduct extensive research and do some writing on the history of West Virginia, his adopted state (he is a native of Virginia), and also on flora and fauna of the state;

And he expects to travel a bit, including infrequent trips between Huntington, Cleveland, Washington and New York, where his duties as power in guidance of the Chesapeake & Ohio often took him, and also to make his first trip to the west coast.

the Maryland theater. A malingerer, a bully, a thief but nobody's fool is Sergeant Barstow and Beery plays him to the hilt with all the familiar Beery mannerisms which audiences love.

The star, however, has plenty of support. Dolores Del Rio makes a return to the screen as the Russian girl, Jenny, who becomes a fugitive after killing her former fiance, a Confederate officer. For more than a year Miss Del Rio was absent from leading roles.

John Wray has a highly effective scene as the father of the family, murdered by a berserk soldier. CHAPTER ONE

LINDA HAD SEEN Ronald last on a rainy night, one year ago, at a railroad station. A train was coming and Ronald was taking it.

Now, as she glimpsed him through the smoke-fogged drawing room in a Manhattan penthouse high above the East river, where too many people talked too much and too fast, the cup in her slim hand wobbled.

Tall, browned, lean, moving slowly in his expensive tweeds, Ronald crossed to speak to the hostess. His profile was toward Linda—that profile which had coaxed her eyes away from the movie screen back at Hamilton, Va., because he was so much better looking than cinema men.

Ronald turned and stood quite still. He narrowed his eyes a little, as though someone had told him something he didn't quite believe. Then he smiled, his mouth twisted into the grin she had known since she was ten and he was twelve, and he started toward her.

Linda and Ronald had intended to say goodby quite casually that rainy April night just twelve months ago. She had thought that Ronald would kiss her lightly, as though he were going back to college and would see her at a game or a house party somewhere. After all, it was sort of maudlin to get excited because all of that was over. Ronald's father's estate had yielded nothing but debts, and Ronald needed a job.

Then, as the train slowed down, Ronald put his arms around her. He didn't kiss her. Just stood, clutching her, as though he wanted to miss the train. At last he said:

"I feel—things about you, Linda. You know them. Always remember, won't you?" Then he tried to be gay. "Some night, when my name's news, I'll give you a ring from Singapore or Trieste or the Hoboken ferry!"

He picked up his well-worn pigskin bags, the case which held the trumpet on which he intended to swing to fame, and climbed on the train.

One year before . . . and now he was coming. Not by intention. By accident. And she didn't know how to act. Lots of things could have happened to Ronald in this year which had started with two letters, a card from a ship whose orchestra he had joined, and a cable from London when he landed in an obscure place in a famous band. Then he had slipped into strange silence months ago.

Linda steadied her wide green eyes. With conscious effort she sent dark eyebrows and the corners of her red mouth flying upward. She even wrinkled her short, straight nose a little, never guessing the tall young man who was almost in front of her remembered the gesture.

But when Ronald's strong hands closed over hers, her heart became a trapeze that swung madly. She spoke calmly, though.

"Hi, Ronnie! I've been waiting for the telephone to ring." Not one tear tripped her sweet, husky tones.

"I couldn't call, I ran out of nickles," he answered in the mood she had established, but his eyes searched hers. "You aren't the same, Linda. You've changed."

"Wiser, I think," she parried.

"Ronald, Ronald, you could have reversed the charges! Only you couldn't. You're too independent. There wasn't an hour that I didn't listen for the bell, or watch for the caliman."

Ronald didn't smile when he replied. His gray eyes were serious. "I had your old number, Linda. The one for your 'phone down in Virginia—Center 403. I did call, and they said the telephone was disconnected."

"You did call?" Now her smile was as radiant, there were stars in the deep green of her eyes. "You remembered. Why, Ronnie?"

"Because we had a compact," he answered, just as though a year was nothing but the space between two dances or two games. He said the words slowly, gravely, like a prayer you laid by to be remembered.

"You stopped writing so long ago," Linda said. "Where did you go?"

"I stopped writing," he said heavily, "because I had nothing to say. A traveling troubadour may pick up news, but it's not likely to interest a girl back home. Then when I did get back three months ago, I heard your Aunt Susan Jennie was married and you had gone out to get some fame. By the way, what do you do?"

"I feel—things about you, Linda. You know them."

It was such a matter-of-fact statement that it broke a spell that had come with the rain, the music, the telephone call to a number that existed only in memory now.

"I'm with the Bagley Models' agency."

"Whew! A girl who poses for magazine covers, stockings, and breakfast food and gadgets! Then the freckles on your nose didn't keep you from anything good? You know, I always liked them. They're gone now." He looked disappointed.

"Have been, Ronnie darling, for four years. Maybe you just don't remember me since I've grown up. But I'm not a model. My features aren't right and I'm not tall enough—I sit at the desk in the reception room and tell the models what to do and initiate the new ones into Mr. Bagley's glamorous presence. But I like it." Then she recalled that she didn't know what Ronald was doing.

"Where did the trumpet take you?" she asked. "You're prosperous, you weigh more, you're happy."

"I'm doing some numbers in a new show that features the band I played with in London. Heard of 'Swing the Chorus'? I've got a contract, and we're going on the air, too, and today, alone, I made two records. Don't you read the music and entertainment notes?"

Moorefield Moose Whip Celanese Nine

Moorefield, W. Va., June 27—Pounding the offerings of three hurlers for 14 safeties, the newly-formed Moorefield Moose baseball team easily defeated the Celanese Local 1874 crew of Cumberland, 13 to 4, in a recent game here.

The Bighorns scored five runs in the opening heat, added single tallies in the second and fourth frames, pushed two more runs across in the fifth and concluded their scoring with a four-run outburst in the eighth. Celanese scored single tallies in the first, third, fifth and eighth.

Combs and Vetter divided the pitching burden for the winners. Combs worked the first five innings giving up nine safeties, while Vetter permitted but one hit in four stanzas. Each struck out six batters.

Johnny Allen started on the peak for the Marylanders but was driven to cover before he could retire the side in the first canto. He was supplanted by Carl Frantz, who surrendered seven raps in four heats. Bradley twirled three and one-third innings, giving up three bingles and Dale Broadwater finished the game pitching to one batsman for the final out.

Herbaugh, Keller, Vetter, Hill and Combs of the Bighorns and Long, Broadwater and Hahn of the Celanese all got two hits each. The Moose team has several open dates. Teams interested in meeting the locals should write or call H. J. Saville, 25-W, Moorefield.

Ralph Martin Paces Old German Batters

Ralph "Spud" Martin, with a mark of .681, is leading the batters of the Old Germans, undefeated pacesetters of the Tri-County Baseball League, according to averages compiled by Paul Mullan, the team's official scorer.

Martin, an outfielder, has hit safely 15 times in 22 official trips to the platter and has dented the rubber payoff mat 10 times. Short-top Ed Widdows is runnerup with a .500 average, gathering 17 hits in 34 appearances with the willow. Widdows leads in druns with 14.

Bob Hose, third baseman, is next with a .457 mark and Catcher Earl Sellers ranks fourth with .447. Other ash wielders hitting in the select circle are "Chick" Cubbage .428, Lou Riehl .361, and Bob Herboldsheimer .333.

Mrs. Meckley Cops State Golf Match

Baltimore, June 27. (AP)—The field of contenders for the Maryland women's golf championship narrowed to eight today with at least two pre-tourney favorites fallen by the wayside but with the medalist, a Washingtonian, still going strong.

Mrs. Betty Meckley, who took the qualifying honors with a first-day 79, survived the first round handily, defeating Effie Bowes of Elkridge 7 and 6, and was paired today with Regina Downey, of Hillendale.

Other pairings in the championship flight today:

Mrs. Myron Davey, Congressional, vs. Mrs. L. G. Pray, Manor.

Miss Elizabeth Bronthron, Hillendale, vs. Mrs. H. J. Cooper, Kenwood.

Mrs. W. R. Stokes, Manor, vs. Mrs. Mary Louise Bell, Terra Mariae.

Mrs. Jerome Sloman of Baltimore, the defending champion, was already out of the running, eliminated in a first round upset. Also eliminated was Mrs. Leo Walper of Washington, a finalist in the District of Columbia tournament last week.

Dodgers Nose Out Chicago Cubs, 5 to 4

Tamulis Scores Win in Role of Relief Hurler

Three-Run Rally Knocks Tex Carleton Out of Box in the Eighth

Brooklyn Cops Contest in Same Frame on Two Hits, Walk and a Fly

BROOKLYN, June 27 (AP)—Brooklyn took the final game of the series from the Chicago Cubs at Ebbets field today, 5 to 4, as Big Bill Lee gained the questionable distinction of being the first National League flinger to lose ten decisions.

Trailing by a run going into the eighth, the Dodgers brought joy to 17,000 fans by pushing across the tying and winning scores on a fluke double by Dixie Walker, a walk, a double steal, a slashing single by Dolf Camilli and Joe Vosmik's fly to center.

The rally saved Tex Carleton from absorbing his second loss of the year and gave the victory to lefty Vito Tamulis, who relieved him in the course of a three-run Chicago rally in the eighth.

Carleton, who has completed only one of eight starts since his early season no-hitter, was started on his way to the baths by pinch-hitter Billy Rogell's home run over the scoreboard with Todd on base, when Tex walked the next man, Lee, he was yanked.

Major Leagues Have Their Unsung Heroes

By JOHN LARDNER

PHILADELPHIA, June 27—There are certain dove-gray athletes in major league baseball, fine ball players, who do not seem to be able to find their way into any part of the newspapers except the box score, and it would not surprise me if a couple of them were to set fire to the White House some evening after supper just for the sweet and novel experience of making a headline.

How much do you hear about Mike Kreevich? Have you ever heard of Mike Kreevich at all, for that matter? I have it on the authority of most of the managers in the American League that Kreevich is one of the three or four best players in the game today, but the managers do not write the stories.

They Know Him

The most they can do, when they have the chance, is vote Michael to the all-star team. When the fans vote, the name of Kreevich is conspicuous by its absence. And that's the only way Mike has ever been conspicuous. He's remoter from the public than a Trappist monk on the top of a hill.

To tell the truth, I don't know who Kreevich is myself. I've talked to him once or twice, and seen him play dozens of times, but I sometimes doubt if there is such a guy. The only way I can reassure myself is to check now and then with Joe McCarthy or Connie Mack or some other reliable eyewitness.

"You bet there is a Kreevich," these boys will say, and they often wish there wasn't.

If you've seen the White Sox, you've seen Mike. He's a short, wide, strongly-built little fellow who operates in center field, and boy, how he operates. I have never beheld a surer judge of a fly ball, a man who covers more ground with less waste movement, a smoother and deadlier expert on ground balls, a smarter outfielder, or an outfielder with a stronger and more accurate throwing arm. Now and then someone takes a chance on Joe Di Maggio's arm, or Melvin Ott's. But not on Kreevich's.

That's just the beginning. This obscure character hits consistently over .300, and his hits comes at the right times. He is perhaps the best and least-noted base-runner in the game—the best and least-noted since Charlie Gehringer was in his prime. It's not merely the matter of stolen bases—though Michael's burglarly quotient, his average of successful steals, rivals the great Max Carey's. It's also the matter of taking that extra base on an infield or outfield play, when you can get away with it. Mike gets away with it. He always takes the maximum number of bases.

To round out this paean, I will add that Mr. Kreevich is a team player, a hustler, and a popular guy. In short, a ball player's ball player.

"Look at Me!"

Why is he not the public's ball player? Well, I guess a certain amount of razzle-dazzle is indispensable in our national pastime—and a certain dramatic way of doing things. Di Maggio is quiet, but dramatic. His actions in the field yell for attention. They say: "Look at the way I'm doing this." Kreevich just does it.

The aforesaid Charlie Gehringer is also a dove-gray fellow, and while Charles is famous today, you must remember that he played the best second base in the game for a number of years before we began to pay him any heed. Even now, few people know that Gehringer was a great base-runner. Next to Kreevich, he stole a base more quietly than any player I've seen. He was on first, and then he was on second. I remember a time, when I was sitting next to George H. Ruth at the world series of 1935, that Gehringer stole a valuable but very unobstrusive base, without drawing a throw from the catcher.

"They certainly weren't looking for that," I muttered.

"When they're not looking for it, that guy always steals," snapped the Babe. "It's automatic. Are you just finding that out?"

There are good players around today, besides Kreevich, whom the public has failed to catch up with. There's a third baseman here in Philadelphia, Merrill May—a ball player's ball player. There's Jimmy Brown, in St. Louis, and Eddie Joost, in Cincinnati, and Mike Tresh, in Chicago.

These fellows are good, and May, of the Phillies, may turn out great. Kreevich is already great. And where is it getting him?

If you don't believe there is a Kreevich, I'll produce affidavits.

East Faces West In Tennis Classic Opening Today

Renewal of Fifty-One Year Old Tests Scheduled for Sewickley

SEWICKLEY, Pa, June 27 (AP)—East challenges West and California in particular tomorrow, reviving a historic net rivalry expected to go a long way towards deciding on which end of the nation lies lawn tennis supremacy.

Renewal of the fifty-one-year-old intersectional classic as a temporary successor to war-cancelled Davis cup international matches brings together a sprinkling of America's top-ranking shotmakers.

Frankie Parker, the U. S. Lawn Tennis Association's second-ranked player from Seabright, N. J., heads the Eastern contingent with support of Gardnar Mulloy, No. 8, Miami Beach, Fla., Henry Prusoff, No. 10, Coral Gables, Fla., and Archibald Henderson, North Carolinan, rated among "Class A" players just below ranking stars.

The western squad of four Californians includes fourth-ranked Welby Van Horn, John Albert Kramer, No. 17, Eddie Alloo, No. 19, and last but not least is Francis L. Kovacs, who may emerge the tourney's surprise package. An injury kept Kovacs out of the rankings last year but he's coming along fast.

Following Davis cup style for the first time, the tourney gets under way with two singles matches pitting Van Horn against Parker and Mulloy against Kovacs. This will be reversed in Sunday's singles with Kovacs engaging Parker and Van Horn taking on Mulloy. Mulloy and Prusoff challenged Kramer and Van Horn in doubles Saturday.

Both Captain Walter Pate, of the Easterners, and Skippers Sam Hardy, of the Californians, only living successful Davis cup captains, think victory will be theirs after a tough struggle.

AAU Championships Will Start Today

FRESNO, Calif., June 27 (AP) — America's greatest track and field athletes, denied a chance to gain international glory because of war-wrecked olympic games, stage a two-day domestic version of the games tomorrow and Saturday nights in the 52nd running of the National A. A. U. Championships.

A staggering array of stars, nearly 300 from every section of the country, will compete in Fresno State college stadium. Junior championships will be decided Friday night and senior events Saturday night.

Headlining the competition will be the 1,500-meter run. The event will see Glenn Cunningham, grandpa of the topnotch flat racers, bidding for his sixth national crown. He recently ran the second fastest 1,500 meters ever clocked in this country, 3:49.

Vale Summit Girls Score Fourth Win

Manager June Higgins' Vale Summit outfit remained at the top of the Georges Creek Girls' Softball League standing by downing Gilmore 29-2 at Vale Summit for its fourth straight victory.

The undefeated Vale Summit lassies also hold a forfeit victory over Coney and, in addition, have topped Detmold 13-4, Barton 11-6 and Gilmore.

B. Higgins fanned eight Gilmore batters and paced Vale Summit's 26-hit attack with a pair of doubles. The score:

Houston Lockheart, plow foreman for the huge King Ranch in Texas, relates an astounding experience. He was going along a pasture fence near Kingsville one morning when he saw a coyote come down on a point exactly like a bird dog. The coyote held the point for a full minute, then broke and pounced into the center of a covey of bobwhites. He came up with one in his mouth and slunk away in the brush.

The SPORT TRAIL

By WHITNEY MARTIN

NEW YORK, June 27 (AP)—The Brooklyn Dodgers will give the retired Van Mungo a cut in their world series money, a generous gesture even if it is tied up with the "if we get some ham, we'll give you some ham and eggs, if we get some eggs," idea.

In fact, it's a doubly generous gesture in that Mungo, like the "most likely to succeed" lad who wound up in the hoosegow, usually was a source of disappointment to his well-wishers, and on top of that his conduct didn't always promote serenity of mind among his bosses.

Like Lefty Grissom, he was a never-never, or hardly ever, guy. Possessed of an abundance of natural talent, he was a perennial "next year" man, but next year never came.

Sure, he won 18 games twice with a club so far down it only caught the echo of the Bronx cheers. Sure, his earned run average was over four only once, and twice was under three. Those feats are trademarks of a good pitcher.

But Van Mungo was expected to be better than a good pitcher. From that day in 1931 when, fresh from the Hartford club, he came to Brooklyn to dazzle the fans with his amazing speed in turning in a two-hit shutout over Boston, he was hailed as another Dazzy Vance.

But as Mungo was striking out opposing batters his own temperment was rapping him for singles. He was truculent. He didn't care much about training rules. When his support stumbled, he grumbled.

In 1936, he quit the club cold; asked that he be traded. His teammates weren't giving him support, he charged. He was suspended and fined $200, but even as he was chastised he demanded a new contract, with more money.

He won 18 and lost 19 that year, and also developed a sore arm from which he never fully recovered. Nevertheless, he held out in 1937, and finally signed for a reported $15,000 salary.

He ran into more trouble in 1937. From a sunup brawl with teammate Jim Bucher after a night of whoopee Mungo emerged with an elegant shiner, a $1,000 fine and another suspension.

Later the same year, he traced his arm trouble to his tonsils, a favorite bit of detective work practiced by ailing pitchers, who search everything but their arm looking for the cause of their difficulty.

The tonsils were removed, and so was Mungo. Burleigh Grimes suspended him for insubordination. It seems the club arranged to have Mungo take treatments for his arm, and Grimes couldn't figure out why Mr. Mungo was always too busy to take the treatments.

He won nine and lost 11 in 1937, but the Cubs thought enough of his possibilities to offer $75,000 for him in 1938, and the Cards also trolled for him without success. The Dodgers paid him another $15,000 for his services, which resulted in four victories and 11 defeats.

He didn't have much of a talking point for a 1939 contract, but he nevertheless held out until Commissioner Landis showed him the error of his ways, and he accepted a $5,000 salary.

Of late, however, he has been a changed man. He became a diligent worker, taking his bumps with good grace. Unless the doctors can whittle out the trouble in his arm, however, it appears the transformation has come too late for a man who, like Dizzy Dean, had great possibilities, but who, unlike Dizzy, never reached the expected heights.

And the ironical part of it is that his retirement comes at a time when, for the first time since he joined the club, the Dodgers really have a chance to finish one-two.

Stanley Harris is in his 11th year as manager of the Washington Nationals. But not consecutively.

Fritzi Stifel Quarrier Bids for Tenth Title

WHEELING, W. Va., June 27 (AP)—Fritzi Stifel Quarrier, who has acquired nine West Virginia women's amateur golf championships, announced today she would make a bid for her tenth next weeks at White Sulphur Springs.

Mrs. Quarrier did not compete in 1938 and 1939, when Mrs. Ann Hoblitzell, of Parkersburg, won her second and third titles.

It was the little Mrs. Hoblitzell who defeated Fritzi in 1935 to break the Wheeling Golfer's long reign over the state amateurs. Mrs. Quarrier regained the championship in 1937 with a 2 and 1 victory over Mrs. Hoblitzell. Since that time Mrs. Quarrier has not competed.

Mrs. Quarrier's nine titles, an all-time record for any contender in the women's competition, matched the number won by her uncle, Jule Pollock, of Wheeling.

Free Lunch on the Wing

The black skimmer, a species of bird related to the gull and tern families, has a novel way of dining. The lower mandible of the bill is much longer than the upper, and the skimmer flies along the surface of the water, scooping up insects with his razor-like lower bill. Because this bird flies very close to the surface of the water when getting his free lunch, he cannot flap his wings downward to any extent for fear of striking the water and thus frightening his prey. The resultant flight of the bird is very erratic and comical.

Major Leagues Have Their Unsung Heroes

By JOHN LARDNER

PHILADELPHIA, June 27—There are certain dove-gray athletes in major league baseball, fine ball players, who do not seem to be able to find their way into any part of the newspapers except the box score, and it would not surprise me if a couple of them were to set fire to the White House some evening after supper just for the sweet and novel experience of making a headline.

How much do you hear about Mike Kreevich? Have you ever heard of Mike Kreevich at all, for that matter? I have it on the authority of most of the managers in the American League that Kreevich is one of the three or four best players in the game today, but the managers do not write the stories.

They Know Him

The most they can do, when they have the chance, is vote Michael to the all-star team. When the fans vote, the name of Kreevich is conspicuous by its absence. And that's the only way Mike has ever been conspicuous. He's remoter from the public than a Trappist monk on the top of a hill.

To tell the truth, I don't know who Kreevich is myself. I've talked to him once or twice, and seen him play dozens of times, but I sometimes doubt if there is such a guy. The only way I can reassure myself is to check now and then with Joe McCarthy or Connie Mack or some other reliable eyewitness.

"You bet there is a Kreevich," these boys will say, and they often wish there wasn't.

If you've seen the White Sox, you've seen Mike. He's a short, wide, strongly-built little fellow who operates in center field, and boy, how he operates. I have never beheld a surer judge of a fly ball, a man who covers more ground with less waste movement, a smoother and deadlier expert on ground balls, a smarter outfielder, or an outfielder with a stronger and more accurate throwing arm. Now and then someone takes a chance on Joe Di Maggio's arm, or Melvin Ott's. But not on Kreevich's.

That's just the beginning. This obscure character hits consistently over .300, and his hits comes at the right times. He is perhaps the best and least-noted base-runner in the game—the best and least-noted since Charlie Gehringer was in his prime. It's not merely the matter of stolen bases—though Michael's burglarly quotient, his average of successful steals, rivals the great Max Carey's. It's also the matter of taking that extra base on an infield or outfield play, when you can get away with it. Mike gets away with it. He always takes the maximum number of bases.

To round out this paean, I will add that Mr. Kreevich is a team player( a hustler, and a popular guy. In short, a ball player's ball player.

"Look at Me!"

Why is he not the public's ball player? Well, I guess a certain amount of razzle-dazzle is indispensable in our national pastime—and a certain dramatic way of doing things. Di Maggio is quiet, but dramatic. His actions in the field yell for attention. They say: "Look at the way I'm doing this." Kreevich just does it.

The aforesaid Charlie Gehringer is also a dove-gray fellow, and while Charles is famous today, you must remember that he played the best second base in the game for a number of years before we began to pay him any heed. Even now, few people know that Gehringer was a great base-runner. Next to Kreevich, he stole a base more quietly than any player I've seen. He was on first, and then he was on second. I remember a time, when I was sitting next to George H. Ruth at the world series of 1935, that Gehringer stole a valuable but very unobstrusive base, without drawing a throw from the catcher.

"They certainly weren't looking for that," I muttered.

"When they're not looking for it, that guy always steals," snapped the Babe. "It's automatic. Are you just finding that out?"

There are good players around today, besides Kreevich, whom the public has failed to catch up with. There's a third baseman here in Philadelphia, Merrill May—a ball player's ball player. There's Jimmy Brown, in St. Louis, and Eddie Joost, in Cincinnati, and Mike Tresh, in Chicago.

These fellows are good, and May, of the Phillies, may turn out great. Kreevich is already great. And where is it getting him?

Renewal of Fifty-One Year Old Tests Scheduled for Sewickley

SEWICKLEY, Pa, June 27 (AP)—East challenges West and California in particular tomorrow, reviving a historic net rivalry expected to go a long way towards deciding on which end of the nation lies lawn tennis supremacy.

Renewal of the fifty-one-year-old intersectional classic as a temporary successor to war-cancelled Davis cup international matches brings together a sprinkling of America's top-ranking shotmakers.

Frankie Parker, the U. S. Lawn Tennis Association's second-ranked player from Seabright, N. J., heads the Eastern contingent with support of Gardnar Mulloy, No. 8, Miami Beach, Fla., Henry Prusoff, No. 10, Coral Gables, Fla., and Archibald Henderson, North Carolinan, rated among "Class A" players just below ranking stars.

The western squad of four Californians includes fourth-ranked Welby Van Horn, John Albert Kramer, No. 17, Eddie Alloo, No. 19, and last but not least is Francis L. Kovacs, who may emerge the tourney's surprise package. An injury kept Kovacs out of the rankings last year but he's coming along fast.

Following Davis cup style for the first time, the tourney gets under way with two singles matches pitting Van Horn against Parker and Mulloy against Kovacs. This will be reversed in Sunday's singles with Kovacs engaging Parker and Van Horn taking on Mulloy. Mulloy and Prusoff challenged Kramer and Van Horn in doubles Saturday.

Both Captain Walter Pate, of the Easterners, and Skippers Sam Hardy, of the Californians, only living successful Davis cup captains, think victory will be theirs after a tough struggle.

AAU Championships Will Start Today

FRESNO, Calif., June 27 (AP) — America's greatest track and field athletes, denied a chance to gain international glory because of war-wrecked olympic games, stage a two-day domestic version of the games tomorrow and Saturday nights in the 52nd running of the National A. A. U. Championships.

A staggering array of stars, nearly 300 from every section of the country, will compete in Fresno State college stadium. Junior championships will be decided Friday night and senior events Saturday night.

Headlining the competition will be the 1,500-meter run. The event will see Glenn Cunningham, grandpa of the topnotch flat racers, bidding for his sixth national crown. He recently ran the second fastest 1,500 meters ever clocked in this country, 3:49.

Vale Summit Girls Score Fourth Win

Manager June Higgins' Vale Summit outfit remained at the top of the Georges Creek Girls' Softball League standing by downing Gilmore 29-2 at Vale Summit for its fourth straight victory.

In the only other fourth-week report Pekin claimed a non-appearance forfeit over Lonaconing.

The undefeated Vale Summit lassies also hold a forfeit victory over Coney and, in addition, have topped Detmoid 13-4, Barton 11-6 and Gilmore.

B. Higgins fanned eight Gilmore batters and paced Vale Summit's 26-hit attack with a pair of doubles. The score:

|---|---|
| GILMORE | 010 001 0— 2 6 18 |
| VALE SUMMIT | 728 228 x—29 26 4 |

Gilmore—H. Kroll and V. Leasure. Vale Summit—B. Higgins and J. Higgins.

Western Pointer

Houston Lockheart, plow foreman for the huge King Ranch in Texas, relates an astounding experience. He was going along a pasture fence near Kingsville one morning when he saw a coyote come down on a point exactly like a bird dog. The coyote held the point for a full minute, then broke and pounced into the center of a covey of bobwhites. He came up with one in his mouth and slunk away in the brush.

The SPORT TRAIL

By WHITNEY MARTIN

NEW YORK, June 27 (AP)—The Brooklyn Dodgers will give the retired Van Mungo a cut in their world series money, a generous gesture even if it is tied up with the "if we get some ham, we'll give you some ham and eggs, if we get some eggs," idea.

In fact, it's a doubly generous gesture in that Mungo, like the "most likely to succeed" lad who wound up in the hoosegow, usually was a source of disappointment to his well-wishers, and on top of that his conduct didn't always promote serenity of mind among his bosses.

Like Lefty Grissom, he was a never-never, or hardly ever, guy. Possessed of an abundance of natural talent, he was a perennial "next year" man, but next year never came.

Sure, he won 18 games twice with a club so far down it only caught the echo of the Bronx cheers. Sure, his earned run average was over four only once, and twice was under three. Those feats are trademarks of a good pitcher.

But Van Mungo was expected to be better than a good pitcher. From that day in 1931 when, fresh from the Hartford club, he came to Brooklyn to dazzle the fans with his amazing speed in turning in a two-hit shutout over Boston, he was hailed as another Dazzy Vance.

But as Mungo was striking out opposing batters his own temperment was rapping him for singles. He was truculent. He didn't care much about training rules. When his support stumbled, he grumbled.

In 1936, he quit the club cold; asked that he be traded. His teammates weren't giving him support, he charged. He was suspended and fined $200, but even as he was chastised he demanded a new contract, with more money.

He won 18 and lost 19 that year, and also developed a sore arm from which he never fully recovered. Nevertheless, he held out in 1937, and finally signed for a reported $15,000 salary.

He ran into more trouble in 1937. From a sunup brawl with teammate Jim Bucher after a night of whoopee Mungo emerged with an elegant shiner, a $1,000 fine and another suspension.

Later the same year, he traced his arm trouble to his tonsils, a favorite bit of detective work practiced by ailing pitchers, who search everything but their arm looking for the cause of their difficulty.

The tonsils were removed, and so was Mungo. Burleigh Grimes suspended him for insubordination. It seems the club arranged to have Mungo take treatments for his arm, and Grimes couldn't figure out why Mr. Mungo was always too busy to take the treatments.

He won nine and lost 11 in 1937, but the Cubs thought enough of his possibilities to offer $75,000 for him in 1938, and the Cards also trolled for him without success. The Dodgers paid him another $15,000 for his services, which resulted in four victories and 11 defeats.

He didn't have much of a talking point for a 1939 contract, but he nevertheless held out until Commissioner Landis showed him the error of his ways, and he accepted a $5,000 salary.

Of late, however, he has been a changed man. He became a diligent worker, taking his bumps with good grace. Unless the doctors can whittle out the trouble in his arm, however, it appears the transformation has come too late for a man who, like Dizzy Dean, had great possibilities, but who, unlike Dizzy, never reached the expected heights.

And the ironical part of it is that his retirement comes at a time when, for the first time since he joined the club, the Dodgers really have a chance to finish one-two.

Stanley Harris is in his 11th year as manager of the Washington Nationals. But not consecutively.

Although handed their third loss of the week, the Golden outfit supplied the day's fielding gem by clicking off a triple play against Candy Kitchen.

Fritzi Stifel Quarrier Bids for Tenth Title

WHEELING, W. Va., June 27 (AP)—Fritzi Stifel Quarrier, who has acquired nine West Virginia women's amateur golf championships, announced today she would make a bid for her tenth next weeks at White Sulphur Springs.

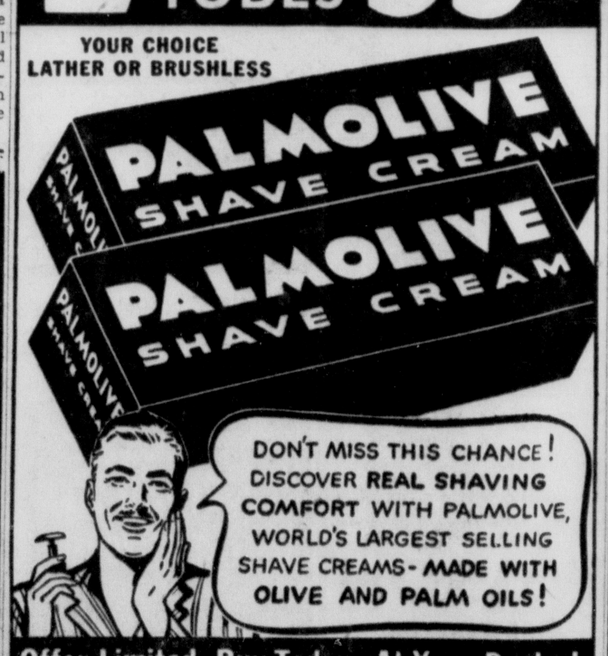

Mrs. Quarrier did not compete in 1938 and 1939, when Mrs. Ann Hoblitzell, of Parkersburg, won her second and third titles.

It was the little Mrs. Hoblitzell who defeated Fritzi in 1935 to break the Wheeling Golfer's long reign over the state amateurs. Mrs. Quarrier regained the championship in 1937 with a 2 and 1 victory over Mrs. Hoblitzell. Since that time Mrs. Quarrier has not competed.

Mrs. Quarrier's nine titles, an all-time record for any contender in the women's competition, matched the number won by her uncle, Jule Pollock, of Wheeling.

Eastern Golfers In College Meet

MANCHESTER, Vt., June 27 (AP)—Half of the eight quarter-finalist berths in the National Collegiate A. A. Golf Championship were won by Eastern college golfers today as the South gained three brackets and the Mid-West one in third round matches.

The survivors are Bill Clark of Dartmouth, Eddie Foy, the Holy Cross football player, Bill Cordingley of Harvard, Harry Haverstick of Swarthmore, Cary Middlecoff of Mississippi, Stewart (Skip) Alexander of Duke, F. Dixon Brooke of Virginia, and Bill Hall of Iowa State.

A form-shattering second round spelled disaster for such outstanding favorites as Johnny Burke of Georgetown, the 1938 intercollegiate champion and Lee Ramsel and Bert McDowell both of Louisiana State.

Free Lunch on the Wing

The black skimmer, a species of bird related to the gull and tern families, has a novel way of dining. The lower mandible of the bill is much longer than the upper, and the skimmer flies along the surface of the water, scooping up insects with his razor-like lower bill. Because this bird flies very close to the surface of the water when getting his free lunch, he cannot flap his wings downward to any extent for fear of striking the water and thus frightening his prey. The resultant flight of the bird is very erratic and comical.

Moorefield Moose Whip Celanese Nine

Moorefield, W. Va., June 27.—Pounding the offerings of three hurlers for 14 safeties, the newly-formed Moorefield Moose baseball team easily defeated the Celanese Local 1874 crew of Cumberland, 13 to 4, in a recent game here.

The Bighorns scored five runs in the opening heat, added single tallies in the second and fourth frames, pushed two more runs across in the fifth and concluded their scoring with a four-run outburst in the eighth. Celanese scored single tallies in the first, third, fifth and eighth.

Combs and Vetter divided the pitching burden for the winners. Combs worked the first five innings giving up nine safeties, while Vetter permitted but one hit in four stanzas. Each struck out six batters.

Johnny Allen started on the peak for the Marylanders but was driven to cover before he could retire the side in the first canto. He was supplanted by Carl Frantz, who surrendered seven raps in four heats. Bradley twirled three and one-third innings, giving up three bingles and Dale Broadwater finished the game, pitching to one batsman for the final out.

Herbaugh, Keller, Vetter, Hill and Combs of the Bighorns and Long, Broadwater and Hahn of the Celanese all got two hits each. The Moose team has several open dates. Teams interested in meeting the locals should write or call H. J. Saville, 25-W, Moorefield.

Ralph Martin Paces Old German Batters

Ralph "Spud" Martin, with a mark of .681, is leading the batters of the Old Germans, undefeated pacesetters of the Tri-County Baseball League, according to averages compiled by Paul Mullan, the team's official scorer.

Martin, an outfielder, has hit safely 15 times in 22 official trips to the platter and has dented the rubber payoff mat 10 times. Shortstop Ed Widdows is runnerup with a .500 average, gathering 17 hits in 34 appearances with the willow. Widdows leads in druns with 14.

Bob Hose, third baseman, is next with a .457 mark and Catcher Earl Sellers ranks fourth with .447. Other ash wielders hitting in the select circle are "Chick" Cubbage .428, Lou Riehl .361, and Bob Herboldsheimer .333.

Mrs. Meckley Cops State Golf Match

Baltimore, June 27. (AP)—The field of contenders for the Maryland women's golf championship narrowed to eight today with at least two pre-tourney favorites fallen by the wayside but with the medalist, a Washingtonian, still going strong.

Mrs. Betty Meckley, who took the qualifying honors with a first-day 79, survived the first round handily, defeating Effie Bowes of Elkridge 7 and 6, and was paired today with Regina Downey, of Hillendale.

Other pairings in the championship flight today:

Mrs. Myron Davey, Congressional, vs. Mrs. L. G. Pray, Manor.

Miss Elizabeth Bronthron, Hillendale, vs. Mrs. H. J. Cooper, Kenwood.

Mrs. W. R. Stokes, Manor, vs. Mrs. Mary Louise Bell, Terra Mariae.

Mrs. Jerome Sloman of Baltimore, the defending champion, was already out of the running, eliminated in a first round upset. Also eliminated was Mrs. Leo Walper of Washington, a finalist in the District of Columbia tournament last week.

Moorefield Moose Whip Celanese Nine

Moorefield, W. Va., June 27—Pounding the offerings of three hurlers for 14 safeties, the newly-formed Moorefield Moose baseball team easily defeated the Celanese Local 1874 crew of Cumberland, 13 to 4, in a recent game here.

The Bighorns scored five runs in the opening heat, added single tallies in the second and fourth frames, pushed two more runs across in the fifth and concluded their scoring with a four-run outburst in the eighth. Celanese scored single tallies in the first, third, fifth and eighth.

Combs and Vetter divided the pitching burden for the winners. Combs worked the first five innings, giving up nine safeties, while Vetter permitted but one hit in four stanzas. Each struck out six batters.

Johnny Allen started on the peak for the Marylanders but was driven to cover before he could retire the side in the first canto. He was supplanted by Carl Frantz, who surrendered seven raps in four heats. Bradley twirled three and one-third innings, giving up three bingles and Dale Broadwater finished the game pitching to one batsman for the final out.

Herbaugh, Keller, Vetter, Hill and Combs of the Bighorns and Long, Broadwater and Hahn of the Celanese all got two hits each. The Moose team has several open dates. Teams interested in meeting the locals should write or call H. J Saville, 25-W, Moorefield.

Ralph Martin Paces Old German Batters

Ralph "Spud" Martin, with a mark of .681, is leading the batters of the Old Germans, undefeated pacesetters of the Tri-County Baseball League, according to averages compiled by Paul Mullan, the team's official scorer.

Martin, an outfielder, has hit safely 15 times in 22 official trips to the platter and has dented the rubber payoff mat 10 times. Shortstop Ed Widdows is runnerup with a .500 average, gathering 17 hits in 34 appearances with the willow. Widdows leads in druns with 14.

Bob Hose, third baseman, is next with a .457 mark and Catcher Earl Sellers ranks fourth with .447. Other ash wielders hitting in the select circle are "Chick" Cubbage .428, Lou Riehl .361, and Bob Herboldsheimer .333.

Mrs. Meckley Cops State Golf Match

Baltimore, June 27. (AP)—The field of contenders for the Maryland women's golf championship narrowed to eight today with at least two pre-tourney favorites fallen by the wayside but with the medalist, a Washingtonian, still going strong.

Mrs. Betty Meckley, who took the qualifying honors with a first-day 79, survived the first round handily, defeating Effie Bowes of Elkridge 7 and 6, and was paired today with Regina Downey, of Hillendale.

Other pairings in the championship flight today:

Mrs. Myron Davey, Congressional, vs. Mrs. L. G. Pray, Manor.

Miss Elizabeth Bronthron, Hillendale, vs. Mrs. H. J. Cooper, Kenwood.

Mrs. W. R. Stokes, Manor, vs. Mrs. Mary Louise Bell, Terra Mariae.

Mrs. Jerome Sloman of Baltimore, the defending champion, was already out of the running, eliminated in a first round upset. Also eliminated was Mrs. Leo Walper of Washington, a finalist in the District of Columbia tournament last week.

Dodgers Nose Out Chicago Cubs, 5 to 4

Tamulis Scores Win in Role of Relief Hurler

Brooklyn Cops Contest in Same Frame on Two Hits, Walk and a Fly

BROOKLYN, June 27 (AP)—Brooklyn took the final game of the series from the Chicago Cubs at Ebbets field today, 5 to 4, as Big Bill Lee gained the questionable distinction of being the first National League flinger to lose ten decisions.

Trailing by a run going into the eighth, the Dodgers brought joy to 17,000 fans by pushing across the tying and winning scores on a pair of walks, a double by Dixie Walker, a walk, a double steal, a slashing single by Dolf Camilli and Joe Vosmik's fly to center.

The rally saved Tex Carleton from absorbing his second loss of the year and gave the victory to lefty Vito Tamulis, who relieved him in the course of a three-run Chicago rally in the eighth.

Carleton, who has completed only one of eight starts since his early season no-hitter, was started on his way to the baths by pinch-hitter Billy Rogell's home run over the scoreboard with Todd on base. When Tex walked the next man, Lee, he was yanked.

Major Leagues Have Their Unsung Heroes

By JOHN LARDNER

PHILADELPHIA, June 27—There are certain dove-gray athletes in major league baseball, fine ball players, who do not seem to be able to find their way into any part of the newspapers except the box score, and it would not surprise me if a couple of them were to set fire to the White House some evening after supper just for the sweet and novel experience of making a headline.

How much do you hear about Mike Kreevich? Have you ever heard of Mike Kreevich at all, for that matter? I have it on the authority of most of the managers in the American League that Kreevich is one of the three or four best players in the game today, but the managers do not write the stories.

They Know Him

The most they can do, when they have the chance, is vote Michael to the all-star team. When the fans vote, the name of Kreevich is conspicuous by its absence. And that's the only way Mike has ever been conspicuous. He's remoter from the public than a Trappist monk on the top of a hill.

To tell the truth, I don't know who Kreevich is myself. I've talked to him once or twice, and seen him play dozens of times, but I sometimes doubt if there is such a guy. The only way I can reassure myself is to check now and then with Joe McCarthy or Connie Mack or some other reliable eyewitness.

"You bet there is a Kreevich," these boys will say, and they often wish there wasn't.

If you've seen the White Sox, you've seen Mike. He's a short, wide, strongly-built little fellow who operates in center field, and boy, how he operates. I have never beheld a surer judge of a fly ball, a man who covers more ground with less waste movement, a smoother and deadlier expert on ground balls, a smarter outfielder, or an outfielder with a stronger and more accurate throwing arm. Now and then someone takes a chance on Joe Di Maggio's arm, or Melvin Ott's. But not on Kreevich's.

That's just the beginning. This obscure character hits consistently over .300, and his hits comes at the right times. He is perhaps the best and least-noted base-runner in the game—the best and least-noted since Charlie Gehringer was in his prime. It's not merely the matter of stolen bases—though Michael's burglarly quotient, his average of successful steals, rivals the great Max Carey's. It's also the matter of taking that extra base on an infield or outfield play, when you can get away with it. Mike gets away with it. He always takes the maximum number of bases.

To round out this paean, I will add that Mr. Kreevich is a team player( a hustler, and a popular guy. In short, a ball player's ball player.

"Look at Me!"

Why is he not the public's ball player? Well, I guess a certain amount of razzle-dazzle is indispensable in our national pastime—and a certain dramatic way of doing things. Di Maggio is quiet, but dramatic. His actions in the field yell for attention. They say: "Look at the way I'm doing this." Kreevich just does it.

The aforesaid Charlie Gehringer is also a dove-gray fellow, and while Charles is famous today, you must remember that he played the best second base in the game for a number of years before we began to pay him any heed. Even now, few people know that Gehringer was a great base-runner. Next to Kreevich, he stole a base more quietly than any player I've seen. He was on first, and then he was on second. I remember a time, when I was sitting next to George H. Ruth at the world series of 1935, that Gehringer stole a valuable but very unobstrusive base, without drawing a throw from the catcher.

"They certainly weren't looking for that," I muttered.

"When they're not looking for it, that guy always steals," snapped the Babe. "It's automatic. Are you just finding that out?"

There are good players around today, besides Kreevich, whom the public has failed to catch up with. There's a third baseman here in Philadelphia, Merrill May—a ball player's ball player. There's Jimmy Brown, in St. Louis, and Eddie Joost, in Cincinnati, and Mike Tresh, in Chicago.

These fellows are good, and May, of the Phillies, may turn out great. Kreevich is already great. And where is it getting him?

Renewal of Fifty-One Year Old Tests Scheduled for Sewickley

SEWICKLEY, Pa, June 27 (AP)—East challenges West and California in particular tomorrow, reviving a historic net rivalry expected to go a long way towards deciding on which end of the nation lies lawn tennis supremacy.

Renewal of the fifty-one-year-old intersectional classic as a temporary successor to war-cancelled Davis cup international matches brings together a sprinkling of America's top-ranking shotmakers.

Frankie Parker, the U. S. Lawn Tennis Association's second-ranked player from Seabright, N. J., heads the Eastern contingent with support of Gardnar Mulloy, No. 8, Miami Beach, Fla., Henry Prusoff, No. 10, Coral Gables, Fla., and Archibald Henderson, North Carolinan, rated among "Class A" players just below ranking stars.

The western squad of four Californians includes fourth-ranked Welby Van Horn, John Albert Kramer, No. 17, Eddie Alloo, No. 19, and last but not least is Francis L. Kovacs, who may emerge the tourney's surprise package. An injury kept Kovacs out of the rankings last year but he's coming along fast.

Following Davis cup style for the first time, the tourney gets under way with two singles matches pitting Van Horn against Parker and Mulloy against Kovacs. This will be reversed in Sunday's singles with Kovacs engaging Parker and Van Horn taking on Mulloy. Mulloy and Prusoff challenged Kramer and Van Horn in doubles Saturday.

Both Captain Walter Pate, of the Easterners, and Skippers Sam Hardy, of the Californians, only living successful Davis cup captains, think victory will be theirs after a tough struggle.

He was going along a pasture fence near Kingsville one morning when he saw a coyote come down on a point exactly like a bird dog. ## The SPORT TRAIL

By WHITNEY MARTIN

NEW YORK, June 27 (AP)—The Brooklyn Dodgers will give the retired Van Mungo a cut in their world series money, a generous gesture even if it is tied up with the "if we get some ham, we'll give you some ham and eggs, if we get some eggs," idea.

In fact, it's a doubly generous gesture in that Mungo, like the "most likely to succeed" lad who wound up in the hoosegow, usually was a source of disappointment to his well-wishers, and on top of that his conduct didn't always promote serenity of mind among his bosses.

Like Lefty Grissom, he was a never-never, or hardly ever, guy. Possessed of an abundance of natural talent, he was a perennial "next year" man, but next year never came.

Sure, he won 18 games twice with a club so far down it only caught the echo of the Bronx cheers. Sure, his earned run average was over four only once, and twice was under three. Those feats are trademarks of a good pitcher.

But Van Mungo was expected to be better than a good pitcher. From that day in 1931 when, fresh from the Hartford club, he came to Brooklyn to dazzle the fans with his amazing speed in turning in a two-hit shutout over Boston, he was hailed as another Dazzy Vance.

But as Mungo was striking out opposing batters his own temperment was rapping him for singles. He was truculent. He didn't care much about training rules. When his support stumbled, he grumbled.

In 1936, he quit the club cold; asked that he be traded. His teammates weren't giving him support, he charged. He was suspended and fined $200, but even as he was chastised he demanded a new contract, with more money.

He won 18 and lost 19 that year, and also developed a sore arm from which he never fully recovered. Nevertheless, he held out in 1937, and finally signed for a reported $15,000 salary.

He ran into more trouble in 1937. From a sunup brawl with teammate Jim Bucher after a night of whoopee Mungo emerged with an elegant shiner, a $1,000 fine and another suspension.

Later the same year, he traced his arm trouble to his tonsils, a favorite bit of detective work practiced by ailing pitchers, who search everything but their arm looking for the cause of their difficulty.

The tonsils were removed, and so was Mungo. Burleigh Grimes suspended him for insubordination. It seems the club arranged to have Mungo take treatments for his arm, and Grimes couldn't figure out why Mr. Mungo was always too busy to take the treatments.

He won nine and lost 11 in 1937, but the Cubs thought enough of his possibilities to offer $75,000 for him in 1938, and the Cards also trolled for him without success. The Dodgers paid him another $15,000 for his services, which resulted in four victories and 11 defeats.

He didn't have much of a talking point for a 1939 contract, but he nevertheless held out until Commissioner Landis showed him the error of his ways, and he accepted a $5,000 salary.

Of late, however, he has been a changed man. He became a diligent worker, taking his bumps with good grace. Unless the doctors can whittle out the trouble in his arm, however, it appears the transformation has come too late for a man who, like Dizzy Dean, had great possibilities, but who, unlike Dizzy, never reached the expected heights.

And the ironical part of it is that his retirement comes at a time when, for the first time since he joined the club, the Dodgers really have a chance to finish one-two.

Stanley Harris is in his 11th year as manager of the Washington Nationals. But not consecutively.

Fritzi Stifel Quarrier Bids for Tenth Title

WHEELING, W. Va., June 27 (AP)—Fritzi Stifel Quarrier, who has acquired nine West Virginia women's amateur golf championships, announced today she would make a bid for her tenth next weeks at White Sulphur Springs.

Mrs. Quarrier did not compete in 1938 and 1939, when Mrs. Ann Hoblitzell, of Parkersburg, won her second and third titles.

It was the little Mrs. Hoblitzell who defeated Fritzi in 1935 to break the Wheeling Golfer's long reign over the state amateurs. Mrs. Quarrier regained the championship in 1937 with a 2 and 1 victory over Mrs. Hoblitzell. Since that time Mrs. Quarrier has not competed.

Mrs. Quarrier's nine titles, an all-time record for any contender in the women's competition, matched the number won by her uncle, Jule Pollock, of Wheeling.

Eastern Golfers In College Meet

MANCHESTER, Vt., June 27 (AP)—Half of the eight quarter-finalist berths in the National Collegiate A. A. Golf Championship were won by Eastern college golfers today as the South gained three brackets and the Mid-West one in third round matches.

The survivors are Bill Clark of Dartmouth, Eddie Foy, the Holy Cross football player, Bill Cordingley of Harvard, Harry Haverstick of Swarthmore, Cary Middlecoff of Mississippi, Stewart (Skip) Alexander of Duke, F. Dixon Brooke of Virginia, and Bill Hall of Iowa State.

A form-shattering second round spelled disaster for such outstanding favorites as Johnny Burke of Georgetown, the 1938 intercollegiate champion and Lee Ramsel and Bert McDowell both of Louisiana State.

Free Lunch on the Wing

The black skimmer, a species of bird related to the gull and tern families, has a novel way of dining. The lower mandible of the bill is much longer than the upper, and the skimmer flies along the surface of the water, scooping up insects with his razor-like lower bill. Because this bird flies very close to the surface of the water when getting his free lunch, he cannot flap his wings downward to any extent for fear of striking the water and thus frightening his prey. The resultant flight of the bird is very erratic and comical.

Dodgers Nose Out Chicago Cubs, 5 to 4

Tamulis Scores Win in Role of Relief Hurler

Brooklyn Cops Contest in Same Frame on Two Hits, Walk and a Fly

BROOKLYN, June 27 (AP)—Brooklyn took the final game of the series from the Chicago Cubs at Ebbets field today, 5 to 4, as Big Bill Lee gained the questionable distinction of being the first National League flinger to lose ten decisions.

Trailing by a run going into the eighth, the Dodgers brought joy to 17,000 fans by pushing across the tying and winning scores on a fluke double by Dixie Walker, a walk, a double steal, a slashing single by Dolf Camilli and Joe Vosmik's fly to center.

The rally saved Tex Carleton from absorbing his second loss of the year and gave the victory to lefty Vito Tamulis, who relieved him in the course of a three-run Chicago rally in the eighth.

Carleton, who has completed only one of eight starts since his early season no-hitter, was started on his way to the baths by pinch-hitter Billy Rogell's home run over the scoreboard with Todd on base. When Tex walked the next man, Lee, he was yanked.

Major Leagues Have Their Unsung Heroes

By JOHN LARDNER

PHILADELPHIA, June 27—There are certain dove-gray athletes in major league baseball, fine ball players, who do not seem to be able to find their way into any part of the newspapers except the box score, and it would not surprise me if a couple of them were to set fire to the White House some evening after supper just for the sweet and novel experience of making a headline.

How much do you hear about Mike Kreevich? Have you ever heard of Mike Kreevich at all, for that matter? I have it on the authority of most of the managers in the American League that Kreevich is one of the three or four best players in the game today, but the managers do not write the stories.

They Know Him

The most they can do, when they have the chance, is vote Michael to the all-star team. When the fans vote, the name of Kreevich is conspicuous by its absence. And that's the only way Mike has ever been conspicuous. He's remoter from the public than a Trappist monk on the top of a hill.

To tell the truth, I don't know who Kreevich is myself. I've talked to him once or twice, and seen him play dozens of times, but I sometimes doubt if there is such a guy. The only way I can reassure myself is to check now and then with Joe McCarthy or Connie Mack or some other reliable eyewitness.

"You bet there is a Kreevich," these boys will say, and they often wish there wasn't.

If you've seen the White Sox, you've seen Mike. He's a short, wide, strongly-built little fellow who operates in center field, and boy, how he operates. I have never beheld a surer judge of a fly ball, a man who covers more ground with less waste movement, a smoother and deadlier expert on ground balls, a smarter outfielder, or an outfielder with a stronger and more accurate throwing arm. Now and then someone takes a chance on Joe Di Maggio's arm, or Melvin Ott's. But not on Kreevich's.

That's just the beginning. This obscure character hits consistently over .300, and his hits comes at the right times. He is perhaps the best and least-noted base-runner in the game—the best and least-noted since Charlie Gehringer was in his prime. It's not merely the matter of stolen bases—though Michael's burglarly quotient, his average of successful steals, rivals the great Max Carey's. It's also the matter of taking that extra base on an infield or outfield play, when you can get away with it. Mike gets away with it. He always takes the maximum number of bases.

To round out this paean, I will add that Mr. Kreevich is a team player( a hustler, and a popular guy. In short, a ball player's ball player.

"Look at Me!"

Why is he not the public's ball player? Well, I guess a certain amount of razzle-dazzle is indispensable in our national pastime—and a certain dramatic way of doing things. Di Maggio is quiet, but dramatic. His actions in the field yell for attention. They say: "Look at the way I'm doing this." Kreevich just does it.

The aforesaid Charlie Gehringer is also a dove-gray fellow, and while Charles is famous today, you must remember that he played the best second base in the game for a number of years before we began to pay him any heed. Even now, few people know that Gehringer was a great base-runner. Next to Kreevich, he stole a base more quietly than any player I've seen. He was on first, and then he was on second. I remember a time, when I was sitting next to George H. Ruth at the world series of 1935, that Gehringer stole a valuable but very unobstrusive base, without drawing a throw from the catcher.

"They certainly weren't looking for that," I muttered.

"When they're not looking for it, that guy always steals," snapped the Babe. "It's automatic. Are you just finding that out?"

There are good players around today, besides Kreevich, whom the public has failed to catch up with. There's a third baseman here in Philadelphia, Merrill May—a ball player's ball player. There's Jimmy Brown, in St. Louis, and Eddie Joost, in Cincinnati, and Mike Tresh, in Chicago.

These fellows are good, and May, of the Phillies, may turn out great. Kreevich is already great. And where is it getting him?

Renewal of Fifty-One Year Old Tests Scheduled for Sewickley

SEWICKLEY, Pa, June 27 (AP)—East challenges West and California in particular tomorrow, reviving a historic net rivalry expected to go a long way towards deciding on which end of the nation lies lawn tennis supremacy.

Renewal of the fifty-one-year-old intersectional classic as a temporary successor to war-cancelled Davis cup international matches brings together a sprinkling of America's top-ranking shotmakers.

Frankie Parker, the U. S. Lawn Tennis Association's second-ranked player from Seabright, N. J., heads the Eastern contingent with support of Gardnar Mulloy, No. 8, Miami Beach, Fla., Henry Prusoff, No. 10, Coral Gables, Fla., and Archibald Henderson, North Carolinan, rated among "Class A" players just below ranking stars.

The western squad of four Californians includes fourth-ranked Welby Van Horn, John Albert Kramer, No. 17, Eddie Alloo, No. 19, and last but not least is Francis L. Kovacs, who may emerge the tourney's surprise package. An injury kept Kovacs out of the rankings last year but he's coming along fast.

Following Davis cup style for the first time, the tourney gets under way with two singles matches pitting Van Horn against Parker and Mulloy against Kovacs. This will be reversed in Sunday's singles with Kovacs engaging Parker and Van Horn taking on Mulloy. Mulloy and Prusoff challenged Kramer and Van Horn in doubles Saturday.

Both Captain Walter Pate, of the Easterners, and Skippers Sam Hardy, of the Californians, only living successful Davis cup captains, think victory will be theirs after a tough struggle.

AAU Championships Will Start Today

FRESNO, Calif., June 27 (AP) — America's greatest track and field athletes, denied a chance to gain international glory because of war-wrecked olympic games, stage a two-day domestic version of the games tomorrow and Saturday nights in the 52nd running of the National A. A. U. Championships.

A staggering array of stars, nearly 300 from every section of the country, will compete in Fresno State college stadium. Junior championships will be decided Friday night and senior events Saturday night.

Headlining the competition will be the 1,500-meter run. The event will see Glenn Cunningham, grandpa of the topnotch flat racers, bidding for his sixth national crown. He recently ran the second fastest 1,500 meters ever clocked in this country, 3:49.

Like Lefty Grissom, he was a never-never, or hardly ever, guy. Possessed of an abundance of natural talent, he was a perennial "next year" man, but next year never came.

Sure, he won 18 games twice with a club so far down it only caught the echo of the Bronx cheers. Sure, his earned run average was over four only once, and twice was under three. Those feats are trademarks of a good pitcher.

But Van Mungo was expected to be better than a good pitcher. From that day in 1931 when, fresh from the Hartford club, he came to Brooklyn to dazzle the fans with his amazing speed in turning in a two-hit shutout over Boston, he was hailed as another Dazzy Vance.

But as Mungo was striking out opposing batters his own temperment was rapping him for singles. He was truculent. He didn't care much about training rules. When his support stumbled, he grumbled.

In 1936, he quit the club cold; asked that he be traded. His teammates weren't giving him support, he charged. He was suspended and fined $200, but even as he was chastised he demanded a new contract, with more money.

He won 18 and lost 19 that year, and also developed a sore arm from which he never fully recovered. Nevertheless, he held out in 1937, and finally signed for a reported $15,000 salary.

He ran into more trouble in 1937. From a sunup brawl with teammate Jim Bucher after a night of whoopee Mungo emerged with an elegant shiner, a $1,000 fine and another suspension.

Later the same year, he traced his arm trouble to his tonsils, a favorite bit of detective work practiced by ailing pitchers, who search everything but their arm looking for the cause of their difficulty.

The tonsils were removed, and so was Mungo. Burleigh Grimes suspended him for insubordination. It seems the club arranged to have Mungo take treatments for his arm, and Grimes couldn't figure out why Mr. Mungo was always too busy to take the treatments.

He won nine and lost 11 in 1937, but the Cubs thought enough of his possibilities to offer $75,000 for him in 1938, and the Cards also trolled for him without success. The Dodgers paid him another $15,000 for his services, which resulted in four victories and 11 defeats.

He didn't have much of a talking point for a 1939 contract, but he nevertheless held out until Commissioner Landis showed him the error of his ways, and he accepted a $5,000 salary.

Of late, however, he has been a changed man. He became a diligent worker, taking his bumps with good grace. Unless the doctors can whittle out the trouble in his arm, however, it appears the transformation has come too late for a man who, like Dizzy Dean, had great possibilities, but who, unlike Dizzy, never reached the expected heights.

And the ironical part of it is that his retirement comes at a time when, for the first time since he joined the club, the Dodgers really have a chance to finish one-two.

Stanley Harris is in his 11th year as manager of the Washington Nationals. But not consecutively.

Sam's Candy Kitchen drubbed the Golden Bakers to help the Cardinals oust the Bakers from fourth place in the standing and the King crew won over Davis tossers by the forfeit route in other games yesterday.

Although handed their third loss of the week, the Golden outfit supplied the day's fielding gem by clicking off a triple play against Candy Kitchen.

Fritzi Stifel Quarrier Bids for Tenth Title

WHEELING, W. Va., June 27 (AP)—Fritzi Stifel Quarrier, who has acquired nine West Virginia women's amateur golf championships, announced today she would make a bid for her tenth next weeks at White Sulphur Springs.

Mrs. Quarrier did not compete in 1938 and 1939, when Mrs. Ann Hoblitzell, of Parkersburg, won her second and third titles.

It was the little Mrs. Hoblitzell who defeated Fritzi in 1935 to break the Wheeling Golfer's long reign over the state amateurs. Mrs. Quarrier regained the championship in 1937 with a 2 and 1 victory over Mrs. Hoblitzell. Since that time Mrs. Quarrier has not competed.

Mrs. Quarrier's nine titles, an all-time record for any contender in the women's competition, matched the number won by her uncle, Jule Pollock, of Wheeling.

Buffalo, N. Y., June 27. (AP)—Tomorrow night's heavyweight ten-round boxing bout between Bob Pastor and Charley Eagle was changed from an outdoor to an inside affair today.

Eastern Golfers In College Meet

MANCHESTER, Vt., June 27 (AP)—Half of the eight quarter-finalist berths in the National Collegiate A. A. Golf Championship were won by Eastern college golfers today as the South gained three brackets and the Mid-West one in third round matches.

The survivors are Bill Clark of Dartmouth, Eddie Foy, the Holy Cross football player, Bill Cordingley of Harvard, Harry Haverstick of Swarthmore, Cary Middlecoff of Mississippi, Stewart (Skip) Alexander of Duke, F. Dixon Brooke of Virginia, and Bill Hall of Iowa State.

A form-shattering second round spelled disaster for such outstanding favorites as Johnny Burke of Georgetown, the 1938 intercollegiate champion and Lee Ramsel and Bert McDowell both of Louisiana State.

Free Lunch on the Wing

The black skimmer, a species of bird related to the gull and tern families, has a novel way of dining. The lower mandible of the bill is much longer than the upper, and the skimmer flies along the surface of the water, scooping up insects with his razor-like lower bill. Because this bird flies very close to the surface of the water when getting his free lunch, he cannot flap his wings downward to any extent for fear of striking the water and thus frightening his prey. The resultant flight of the bird is very erratic and comical.

Hagerstown Golfers Play Here Tomorrow

First of Series Home-and-Home Matches on Tap

More Than 50 Players To Represent CCC Golf Team

Matches To Start at 1:15--Players Paired in Teams of Two

The first of the annual series of home-and-home golf matches between teams of the Cumberland Country Club and the Fountain Head Country Club, of Hagerstown, will take place tomorrow afternoon on the local links.

Paired in teams of two the matches will get underway at 1:15 p. m. Last year each team won its home match, but the usual "rubber" match at Bedford was not held. Cumberland's team will be without the services of two of its better players in tomorrow's match as George Werkmeister, last year's Spring champion, and Morgan C. Harris, both first-flight golfers, will not be on hand.

Henry W. Price, team captain for the Hagerstown matches, said yesterday that Cumberland would have more than fifty players ready to play, and expected that number would be enough to match with Hagerstown's contingent. However, as some of the players may be forced to withdraw at the last moment Price has asked that all unpaired golfers call him today or tomorrow morning at 3020 so that they may be listed as available for play.

Cumberland Team

The Cumberland team will comprise the following players: Carroll Boggs and Edward Mattingly; C. S. Catherman, Jr. and Elmer Elbin; Dr. J. E. McLean and Carroll France; Lester Millenson and Irving Millenson; Albert Carlson and Dr. K. P. Heintz; James Beacham and Frank Blaul; Dr. H. B. Wood and C. S. Catherman, Sr.; Dr. J. K. ## Schumaker Shuts Out Philadelphia

PHILADELPHIA, June 27 (AP) — Hal Schumacher shutout the Phillies with three singles tonight as the New York Giants pounded Hugh Mulcahy and Lloyd Brown for 15 hits and a 7 to 0 victory before 10,985 at Shibe Park.

Schumacher retired the first 13 Phils to face him. Merrill May then beat out an infield tap that glanced off Schumacher's glove.

In the seventh Johnny Rizzo singled and became the only Phil runner to reach second when Schumacher let loose a wild pitch. May walked, but both were left stranded. Bill Atwood got the third and last Phil hit in the eighth.

The Giants scored three runs in the first on Mel Ott's single with the bases full and Joe Marty's error. They put together three hits with a fielder's choice for two runs in the sixth. In the eighth Schumacher singled Ott home.

Harry Danning's single off relief pitcher Brown accounted for the last Giant run in the ninth.

Pittsburgh Pro Gridders Start Drills August 11

Steelers Will Workout At St. Francis College

PITTSBURGH, Pa., June 27.—Coach Walt Keisling will take his Pittsburgh Steelers professional football club into camp at St. Francis College, Loretto, Pa., on August 11, he has announced. The site was selected by Arthur J. Rooney, president of the local National Football League entry.

The Steelers, numbering approximately 40 players, returned to the Loretto training camp after an absence of one year. The Rooneymen took their conditioning exercises there in 1937 and 1938, but shifted to Two Rivers, Wisconsin, last year. The long trip home from the midwestern camp, however, was not considered beneficial to the local club. Thus, the current move.

Open Season Sept. 8

Pre-season drills will continue until the end of August, when the Steelers will return to Pittsburgh for final preparations for their September 8 opener with the Chicago Cardinals. In all probability a couple of exhibition tilts will be added before the opening of the league season.

Keisling's charges will go into their first drill the day following their arrival at St. Francis College. The opening sessions necessarily will be light, but with the dawning of the third or fourth day in camp Rooney's grid warriors can expect increasingly tough daily assignments.

Intra-Squad Games

Intra-squad games again will highlight the training period and are expected to attract several thousand fans in the Altoona-Cresson-Johnstown district. The veteran members of the squad will oppose the recruits and should find the going much thicker than they have in the past few years. The Steelers' officials have completed a number of trades with other league clubs which should bolster the local aggregation no end. Players secured in trades are regarded as recruits. So the new members of the squad will not want for experience.

While the number of new men will be greater than in recent years, veteran members will be scarce. Many of the group that answered the training tocsin last year are now in other pastures. So the oldsters may discover their rookie brethren a stiff lot to plow when the camp games get under way.

Californians in Net Tourney Upset

HAVERFORD, Pa., June 27. (AP)—Two players from California scored upset victories today in the national intercollegiate tennis championships.

Bill Reedy from Southern California and Bill Canning of California reached the quarter-finals along with top-ranked Don McNeill, of Kenyon, and five other seeded stars.

Canning eliminated his teammate, fifth ranked Robert Peacock, 3-6, 7-5, 6-4, while Reedy humbled Seymour Greenberg, of Northwestern, 6-2, 4-6, 6-3.

McNeill and second seeded Joe Hunt, of Navy, advanced without difficulty. McNeill beat Mation Shane, of Kalamazoo, 6-4, 6-2, while Hunt conquered William Hardie, of Miami, 6-2, 6-4.

The defending champion Frank Guernsey, of Rice, had a tougher time subduing Dave Freedman, of Pomona, 8-6, 8-6.

Women's City Net Tourney Started

Catherine O'Neill defeated Miss Louise Zilch 6-3, 7-5.

Cody Whitman disposed of Dorothy Stewart 6-1, 6-2.

Miss Margaret Hetzel eliminated Mary Raphel 6-0, 6-1.

On the Dingle courts Leo LaNeve defeated Loraine Eisenberg 4-6, 7-5, 6-4. LaNeve will play Winston Pittard today at 5 p. m. on the Dingle courts. Pittard in previous rounds defeated Lua Sykes and David Weiss.

Lawrence Middlecamp and Elmo Gower will meet this afternoon at 4 o'clock at the Country Club courts. Middlecamp won by default yesterday from James Reinhart.

W. E. Hinkel is scheduled to play Walter Harris today at 5 p. m. on the Garlitz courts.

Pen-Mar Loop Postponed Games on Saturday

Howard Northcraft, secretary of the Pen-Mar League, announces that the following schedule of games, postponed earlier in the season, will be played Saturday: Barton at Centreville and Eckhart at Bard.

CLEVELAND'S CHANCE

It has been quite a number of yesterdays since I traveled with a Cleveland ball club, under Nap Lajoie, that had its pennant dream.

That was a ball club good enough to win any flag, barring the breaks it drew — Nig Clarke and Harry Bemis, catchers — Addie Joss, Earl Moore, Dusty Rhoades, Bill Bernhardt, Otto Hess and others on the pitching side — George Stovall, Lajoie, Tuck Turner and Bill Bradley for an infield — Elmer Flick, Harry Bay and others in the outfield — at least seven .300 hitters, including Big Larry, one of the greatest of all time.

One season this club lost seven regulars in less than two weeks. Broken arms and broken legs, spike wounds and everything else.

In the last 40 years Cleveland picked up just one pennant, won by Tris Speaker, the Gray Eagle, 20 years ago.

Tris was an active gallery tramper in the recent U. S. Open at Canterbury. They used to say that a golf swing hurt your batting but Tris played golf at every chance when he was with Boston and Cleveland, and he was the man to finally stop Ty Cobb's long span of leading the league in hitting with .386.

"In place of hurting me, golf helped," Speaker said. "I was never a chop hitter. I always believed in the old 'follow through' at bat."

As an outfielder Tris was an infielder on wheels. The game has never had as great an outfield artist on defense, and few who were better at the plate, swinging the old ash.

Now Cleveland is dreaming of another pennant. This dream was almost spoiled a short while back by a number of young men whose feelings were too easily wounded. Cleveland certainly has as good a chance as anyone else, although that Detroit combination of pitching and hitting will take its full share of beating.

The Yankees have taken a dizzy drop from the Yankees of other years. This drop has included a heavy falling off in hitting, pitching and team morale. They must play at something better than a .700 clip from now on, which is no light accomplishment.

The Red Sox haven't been getting the pitching they hoped to have. Both the Yankees and Red Sox had their share of sorrow in the West on trips just ended.

If Cleveland can muster enough good pitching around the stout right arm of Bobby Feller, one of the best, the Indian outlook will be as roseate as a Georgia sunrise.

I was told earlier in the season by those on the inside that Cleveland had too many bad actors on her ball club, too many who were too temperamental, too hard to handle. When I wrote that, a lusty howl went up. But there was at least partial proof in the Vitt case.

"Temperament," as some philosopher once wrote, "is the highbrow word for ordinary, pure cussedness."

If the Cleveland club can shed this fault, the chance to win will be even brighter.

Cleveland has a first-class ball club. It has one of the best short-stop-second combinations in baseball — possibly the best of the lot. It has a ranking catcher in Rollie Hemsley. And in Bob Feller and Al Milnar it has two of the best slump breakers in the game. All the Indians need is the hustling that has kept Brooklyn's Dodgers clawing at the top.

I hear from those who should know that the recent insurrection has done more good than harm, that the revolting players are now hustling for Vitt, and that Vitt is working better with his men.

The Cleveland ball club can't make any big mistake in hustling for its own good, meaning $100,000 or more in the World Series split.

If Cleveland and Cincinnati both pull through, the Buckeye commonwealth will know one of baseball's hottest civil wars. And the Reds are still the people to beat in the National.

Any team that can call on Derringer, Walters and Thompson in turn has the jump on the field. McKechnie is almost sure to get two well-pitched games in any three from this trio, and possibly three in a row. Detroit can call on the same high-grade pitching, headed by Bucky Newsom.

You can always look out for trouble when your pitching begins to develop indigo spots. In the case of the Yankees, it hasn't been so much on the pitching side — it has been a general cave-in all along their shaky front, especially in the important department of harvesting the succulent tally.—(Released by North American Newspaper Alliance.)

Caseys Win Over Elks in Benefit Softball Tilt 8-4

More Than 600 Witness Contest Featured By Fast Play

The Cumberland Caseys defeated the Cumberland Elks in their benefit Rockingchair League softball game at Community Park yesterday afternoon, 8 to 4, before an estimated attendance of about 700 fans.

It was a thrilling battle all the way with sparkling fielding offsetting some rank errors, but on the whole the fans who came to see an exhibition and did not know what to expect, got a real treat of fast play.

Maurice Stegmaier carried off the fielding honors with two sparkling stops, one a gloved-hand catch of a line drive that was nothing short of spectacular.

The K. of C. hoped on Mosner for three runs in the first inning on Maurice Stegmaier's infield hit, a pass to "Bomber" Becker, Joe McGinn's triple and "Pat" Conway's single. Two errors brought the Casey crew another run in the second, while a single, base on balls and Moore's blast to left produced another K. of C. tally in the third. Two infield hits, two errors and Jack Loibel's triple netted three more Casey runs in the fifth.

Moore blanked the Elks until the fifth when three errors, two infield hits and a long fly minted two runs.

In the seventh the Elks scored two more runs on a pair of singles a wild pitch and a passed ball.

You Figure It

Recently an Indiana farmer was out coon hunting when his dog got an animal running through the woods. The animal treed, but jumped before the farmer got there. It screeched, yowled and otherwise expressed itself. Whereupon the farmer delivered himself of the solemn verdict that his dog had treed an "alkyhoot". Wifflespieg, killiwhacker, hodag and whamdingit are a few other Hoosier-coined words.

Pace, Bantam Champion, Stops Lawrence Gunn

BALTIMORE, June 27 (AP) — George Pace, Cleveland Negro who holds the world bantamweight boxing championship, scored a technical knockout over the veteran Lawrence Gunn, of Baltimore, after one round of vicious fighting in a non-title over-weight bout tonight. Both weighed 123.

Pace went after Gunn in a hurry, pumping lefts to the face and body of the thirty-year-old Baltimore baker, and near the end of the first round caught Gunn flush in the mouth with a whistling left that sent him down for a nine-count with blood gushing from his upper lip.

Gunn regained his feet and managed to last out the round, taking punishment all the while, but Referee Charlie Short refused to let him come out for the second round.

Johnny Shkor, 206, Baltimore, scored a technical knockout over Jim Costello, 210, Harrisburg, Pa., in the third round of a scheduled six-round bout.

Hagerstown Golfers Play Here Tomorrow

More Than 50 Players To Represent CCC Golf Team

Matches To Start at 1:15--Players Paired in Teams of Two

The first of the annual series of home-and-home golf matches between teams of the Cumberland Country Club and the Fountain Head Country Club, of Hagerstown, will take place tomorrow afternoon on the local links.

Paired in teams of two the matches will get underway at 1:15 p. m. Last year each team won its home match, but the usual "rubber" match at Bedford was not held. Cumberland's team will be without the services of two of its better players in tomorrow's match as George Werkmeister, last year's Spring champion, and Morgan C. Harris, both first-flight golfers, will not be on hand.

Henry W. Price, team captain for the Hagerstown matches, said yesterday that Cumberland would have more than fifty players ready to play, and expected that number would be enough to match with Hagerstown's contingent. However, as some of the players may be forced to withdraw at the last moment Price has asked that all unpaired golfers call him today or tomorrow morning at 3020 so that they may be listed as available for play.

Cumberland Team

The Cumberland team will comprise the following players: Carroll Boggs and Edward Mattingly; C. S. Catherman, Jr. and Elmer Elbin; Dr. J. E. McLean and Carroll France; Lester Millenson and Irving Millenson; Albert Carlson and Dr. K. P. Heintz; James Beacham and Frank Blaul; Dr. H. B. Wood and C. S. Catherman, Sr.; Dr. J. K. Rozum and Elmer Gower; William A. Douglas and Porter D. Collins; William Seibert and Harry Nelson; Cyril Croft and A. W. Keight; Dr. A. H. Hawkins and Judge D. L. Sloan; D. E. Pelletier and H. W. Price; R. M. Hudak and J. W. Boncer; William Normand and M. D. Tenney; William Jenkins and Benjamin McCrackin; Robert L. Stallings and Robert E. Barnard; J. Browne and A. Widener; D. W. Smith and Hayden Butler; R. House and William Dietrich; W. R. Brewer and R. Millholand, Sr.; C. H. Griggs and E. R. Allen; B. V. Welsh and F. W. Eiler; R. E. Sewell and R. Welsh, Jr.; A. W. Weber and Victor Heisey; W. O. Schleif and Homer Stoody; Wilbur Seymour and J. E. Bludworth.

Schumaker Shuts Out Philadelphia

PHILADELPHIA, June 27 (AP) — Hal Schumacher shutout the Phillies with three singles tonight as the New York Giants pounded Hugh Mulcahy and Lloyd Brown for 15 hits and a 7 to 0 victory before 10,985 at Shibe Park.

Schumacher retired the first 13 Phils to face him. Merrill May then beat out an infield tap that glanced off Schumacher's glove.

In the seventh Johnny Rizzo singled and became the only Phil runner to reach second when Schumacher let loose a wild pitch. May walked, but both were left stranded. Bill Atwood got the third and last Phil hit in the eighth.

The Giants scored three runs in the first on Mel Ott's single with the bases full and Joe Marty's error. They put together three hits with a fielder's choice for two runs in the sixth. In the eighth Schumacher singled Ott home.

Harry Danning's single off relief pitcher Brown accounted for the last Giant run in the ninth.

Steelers Will Workout At St. Francis College

PITTSBURGH, Pa., June 27.—Coach Walt Keisling will take his Pittsburgh Steelers professional football club into camp at St. Francis College, Loretto, Pa., on August 11, he has announced. The site was selected by Arthur J. Rooney, president of the local National Football League entry.

The Steelers, numbering approximately 40 players, returned to the Loretto training camp after an absence of one year. The Rooneymen took their conditioning exercises there in 1937 and 1938, but shifted to Two Rivers, Wisconsin, last year. The long trip home from the midwestern camp, however, was not considered beneficial to the local club. Thus, the current move.

Open Season Sept. 8

Pre-season drills will continue until the end of August, when the Steelers will return to Pittsburgh for final preparations for their September 8 opener with the Chicago Cardinals. In all probability a couple of exhibition tilts will be added before the opening of the league season.

Keisling's charges will go into their first drill the day following their arrival at St. Francis College. The opening sessions necessarily will be light, but with the dawning of the third or fourth day in camp Rooney's grid warriors can expect increasingly tough daily assignments.

Intra-Squad Games

Intra-squad games again will highlight the training period and are expected to attract several thousand fans in the Altoona-Cresson-Johnstown district. The veteran members of the squad will oppose the recruits and should find the going much thicker than they have in the past few years. The Steelers' officials have completed a number of trades with other league clubs which should bolster the local aggregation no end. Players secured in trades are regarded as recruits. So the new members of the squad will not want for experience.

While the number of new men will be greater than in recent years, veteran members will be scarce. Many of the group that answered the training tocsin last year are now in other pastures. So the oldsters may discover their rookie brethren a stiff lot to plow when the camp games get under way.

Californians in Net Tourney Upset

HAVERFORD, Pa., June 27. (AP)—Two players from California scored upset victories today in the national intercollegiate tennis championships.

Bill Reedy from Southern California and Bill Canning of California reached the quarter-finals along with top-ranked Don McNeill, of Kenyon, and five other seeded stars.

Canning eliminated his teammate, fifth ranked Robert Peacock, 3-6, 7-5, 6-4, while Reedy humbled Seymour Greenberg, of Northwestern, 6-2, 4-6, 6-3.

McNeill and second seeded Joe Hunt, of Navy, advanced without difficulty. McNeill beat Mation Shane, of Kalamazoo, 6-4, 6-2, while Hunt conquered William Hardie, of Miami, 6-2, 6-4.

The defending champion Frank Guernsey, of Rice, had a tougher time subduing Dave Freedman, of Pomona, 8-6, 8-6.

Women's City Net Tourney Started

The women's singles for the city championship got under way yesterday afternoon on the Garlitz courts.

Catherine O'Neill defeated Miss Louise Zilch 6-3, 7-5.

Cody Whitman disposed of Dorothy Stewart 6-1, 6-2.

Miss Margaret Hetzel eliminated Mary Raphel 6-0, 6-1.

On the Dingle courts Leo LaNeve defeated Loraine Eisenberg 4-6, 7-5, 6-4. LaNeve will play Winston Pittard today at 5 p. m. on the Dingle courts. Pittard in previous rounds defeated Lua Syckes and David Weiss.

Lawrence Middlecamp and Elmo Gower will meet this afternoon at 4 o'clock at the Country Club courts. Middlecamp won by default yesterday from James Reinhart.

W. E. Hinkel is scheduled to play Walter Harris today at 5 p. m. on the Garlitz courts.

Pen-Mar Loop Postponed Games on Saturday

Howard Northcraft, secretary of the Pen-Mar League, announces that the following schedule of games, postponed earlier in the season, will be played Saturday: Barton at Centreville and Eckhart at Bard.

CLEVELAND'S CHANCE

It has been quite a number of yesterdays since I traveled with a Cleveland ball club under Nap Lajoie, that had its pennant dream.

That was a ball club good enough to win any flag, barring the breaks it drew — Nig Clarke and Harry Bemis, catchers — Addie Joss, Earl Moore, Dusty Rhoades, Bill Bernhardt, Otto Hess and others on the pitching side — George Stovall, Lajoie, Tuck Turner and Bill Bradley for an infield — Elmer Flick, Harry Bay and others in the outfield — at least seven .300 hitters, including Big Larry, one of the greatest of all time.

One season this club lost seven regulars in less than two weeks. Broken arms and broken legs, spike wounds and everything else.

In the last 40 years Cleveland picked up just one pennant, won by Tris Speaker, the Gray Eagle, 20 years ago.

Tris was an active gallery tramper in the recent U. S. Open at Canterbury. They used to say that a golf swing hurt your batting but Tris played golf at every chance when he was with Boston and Cleveland, and he was the man to finally stop Ty Cobb's long span of leading the league in hitting with .386.

"In place of hurting me, golf helped," Speaker said. "I was never a chop hitter. I always believed in the old 'follow through' at bat."

As an outfielder Tris was an infielder on wheels. The game has never had as great an outfield artist on defense, and few who were better at the plate, swinging the old ash.

Now Cleveland is dreaming of another pennant. This dream was almost spoiled a short while back by a number of young men whose feelings were too easily wounded. Cleveland certainly has as good a chance as anyone else, although that Detroit combination of pitching and hitting will take its full share of beating.

The Yankees have taken a dizzy drop from the Yankees of other years. This drop has included a heavy falling off in hitting, pitching and team morale. They must play at something better than a .700 clip from now on, which is no light accomplishment.

The Red Sox haven't been getting the pitching they hoped to have. Both the Yankees and Red Sox had their share of sorrow in the West on trips just ended.

If Cleveland can muster enough good pitching around the stout right arm of Bobby Feller, one of the best, the Indian outlook will be as roseate as a Georgia sunrise.

I was told earlier in the season by those on the inside that Cleveland had too many bad actors on her ball club, too many who were too temperamental, too hard to handle. When I wrote that, a lusty howl went up. But there was at least partial proof in the Vitt case.

"Temperament," as some philosopher once wrote, "is the highbrow word for ordinary, pure cussedness."

If the Cleveland club can shed this fault, the chance to win will be even brighter.

Cleveland has a first-class ball club. It has one of the best shortstop-second combinations in baseball — possibly the best of the lot. It has a ranking catcher in Rollie Hemsley. And in Bob Feller and Al Milnar it has two of the best slump breakers in the game. All the Indians need is the hustling that has kept Brooklyn's Dodgers clawing at the top.

I hear from those who should know that the recent insurrection has done more good than harm, that the revolting players are now hustling for Vitt, and that Vitt is working better with his men.

The Cleveland ball club can't make any big mistake in hustling for its own good, meaning $100,000 or more in the World Series split.

If Cleveland and Cincinnati both pull through, the Buckeye commonwealth will know one of baseball's hottest civil wars. And the Reds are still the people to beat in the National.

Any team that can call on Derringer, Walters and Thompson in turn has the jump on the field. McKechnie is almost sure to get two well-pitched games in any three from this trio, and possibly three in a row. Detroit can call on the same high-grade pitching, headed by Bucky Newsom.

You can always look out for trouble when your pitching begins to develop indigo spots. In the case of the Yankees, it hasn't been so much on the pitching side — it has been a general cave-in all along their shaky front, especially in the important department of harvesting the succulent tally.—(Released by North American Newspaper Alliance.)

Caseys Win Over Elks in Benefit Softball Tilt 8-4

More Than 600 Witness Contest Featured By Fast Play

The Cumberland Caseys defeated the Cumberland Elks in their benefit Rockingchair League softball game at Community Park yesterday afternoon, 8 to 4, before an estimated attendance of about 700 fans.

It was a thrilling battle all the way with sparkling fielding offsetting some rank errors, but on the whole the fans who came to see an exhibition and did not know what to expect, got a real treat of fast play.

Maurice Stegmaier carried off the fielding honors with two sparkling stops, one a gloved-hand catch of a line drive that was nothing short of spectacular.

The K. of C. hoped on Mosner for three runs in the first inning on Maurice Stegmaier's infield hit, a pass to "Bomber" Becker, Joe McGinn's triple and "Pat" Conway's single. Two errors brought the Casey crew another run in the second, while a single, base on balls and Moore's blast to left produced another K. of C. tally in the third. Two infield hits, two errors and Jack Loibel's triple netted three more Casey runs in the fifth.

Moore blanked the Elks until the fifth when three errors, two infield hits and a long fly minted two runs.

You Figure It

Recently an Indiana farmer was out 'coon hunting when his dog got an animal running through the woods. The animal treed, but jumped before the farmer got there. It screeched, yowled and otherwise expressed itself. Whereupon the farmer delivered himself of the solemn verdict that his dog had treed an "alkyhoot". Wifflespieg, killiwhacker, hodag and whamdingit are a few other Hoosier-coined words.

Pace, Bantam Champion, Stops Lawrence Gunn

BALTIMORE, June 27 (AP) — George Pace, Cleveland Negro who holds the world bantamweight boxing championship, scored a technical knockout over the veteran Lawrence Gunn, of Baltimore, after one round of vicious fighting in a non-title over-weight bout tonight. Both weighed 123.

Pace went after Gunn in a hurry, pumping lefts to the face and body of the thirty-year-old Baltimore baker, and near the end of the first round caught Gunn flush in the mouth with a whistling left that sent him down for a nine-count with blood gushing from his upper lip.

Gunn regained his feet and managed to last out the round, taking punishment all the while, but Referee Charlie Short refused to let him come out for the second round.

Johnny Shkor, 200, Baltimore, scored a technical knockout over Jim Costello, 210, Harrisburg, Pa., in the third round of a scheduled six-round bout.

Celanese and Cold Spring Gun Clubs Take Top Honors

Hinkle Posts Perfect Score --Summer Series Opens

Luke, June 27. — Celanese and Cold Spring gunners have carried off top honors in the first and second matches of the Allegany County Rifle League's summer series, according to results announced here today by O. L. Biggs, secretary of the organization.

Celanese shooters rolled up a total of 1,921 points of a possible 2,000 to capture the first match in which Cold Spring finished second with 1,901 and Frostburg third with 1,849.

In the second match Cold Spring won with 1,928, Celanese was second with 1,918, Frostburg third with 1,888 and Company G fourth with 1,691.

N. Hinkle, Celanese ace, had the only perfect score of the two matches, both fired on the Frostburg range, and in the first contest shared individual honors with R. Bowman, a teammate, each having 395.

At least four other matches will be fired in the summer series. The dates are July 11 and 25 and August 8 and 22. If weather conditions are favorable the series will be extended to include matches on September 5 and 19.

For several years these matches have been contested from four positions, 10 shots prone, five sitting, five kneeling and 10 standing, all at 50 yards, but the current series consists of prone shooting only with 20 shots at 50 yards and 20 at 100. ## Marble and Arnold Win Tennis Title

CINCINNATI, June 27 (AP)—Alice Marble, U. S. Tennis queen, and Mary Arnold teamed up to grab the National clay courts women's doubles championship 6-3, 6-4 from Helen Bernard of New York and Gracyn Wheeler of Los Angeles in a playoff late today.

The powerful overhead smashes which have led Miss Marble, U. S. Women's Champion, to the semi-finals of the Tri-State tournament here provided the necessary punch for victory in the double, rained out last week in Chicago.

Earlier Miss Marble defeated her doubles partner and fellow townswomen from Los Angeles, 6-2, 6-1, in singles matches.

Miss Bernard Trimmed Monica Nolan of Cincinnati, 6-1, 6-4, and Catherine Wolf of Eckhart, Ind., advanced with a 6-1, 6-1 decision over Ann Davis of Columbus.

Ronald Lubin of Los Angeles trimmed Alex Guerry of Chicago, 6-2, 6-1; Arthur Marx of Los Angeles upset Johnny Doeg, a former Californian 5-7, 6-3, 6-3 and Gardner Larned of Chicago downed Barney Welsh of Rockville, Md., 8-6, 6-5.

Doeg had been seeded No. 2 position. Harris Everett of Jackson-Fla., bested Charles Hare of England, 6-3, 4-6, 6-4, in a surprise victory.

Westernport, June 27—The first-place Devon Club tossers and the runnerup Wolverines continued their winning ways in Tri-Towns Softball League in games this week, the leaders taking a hard-fought 6-4 decision from the Oilers and the Wolverines nipping the Eagles by an 8-4 count.

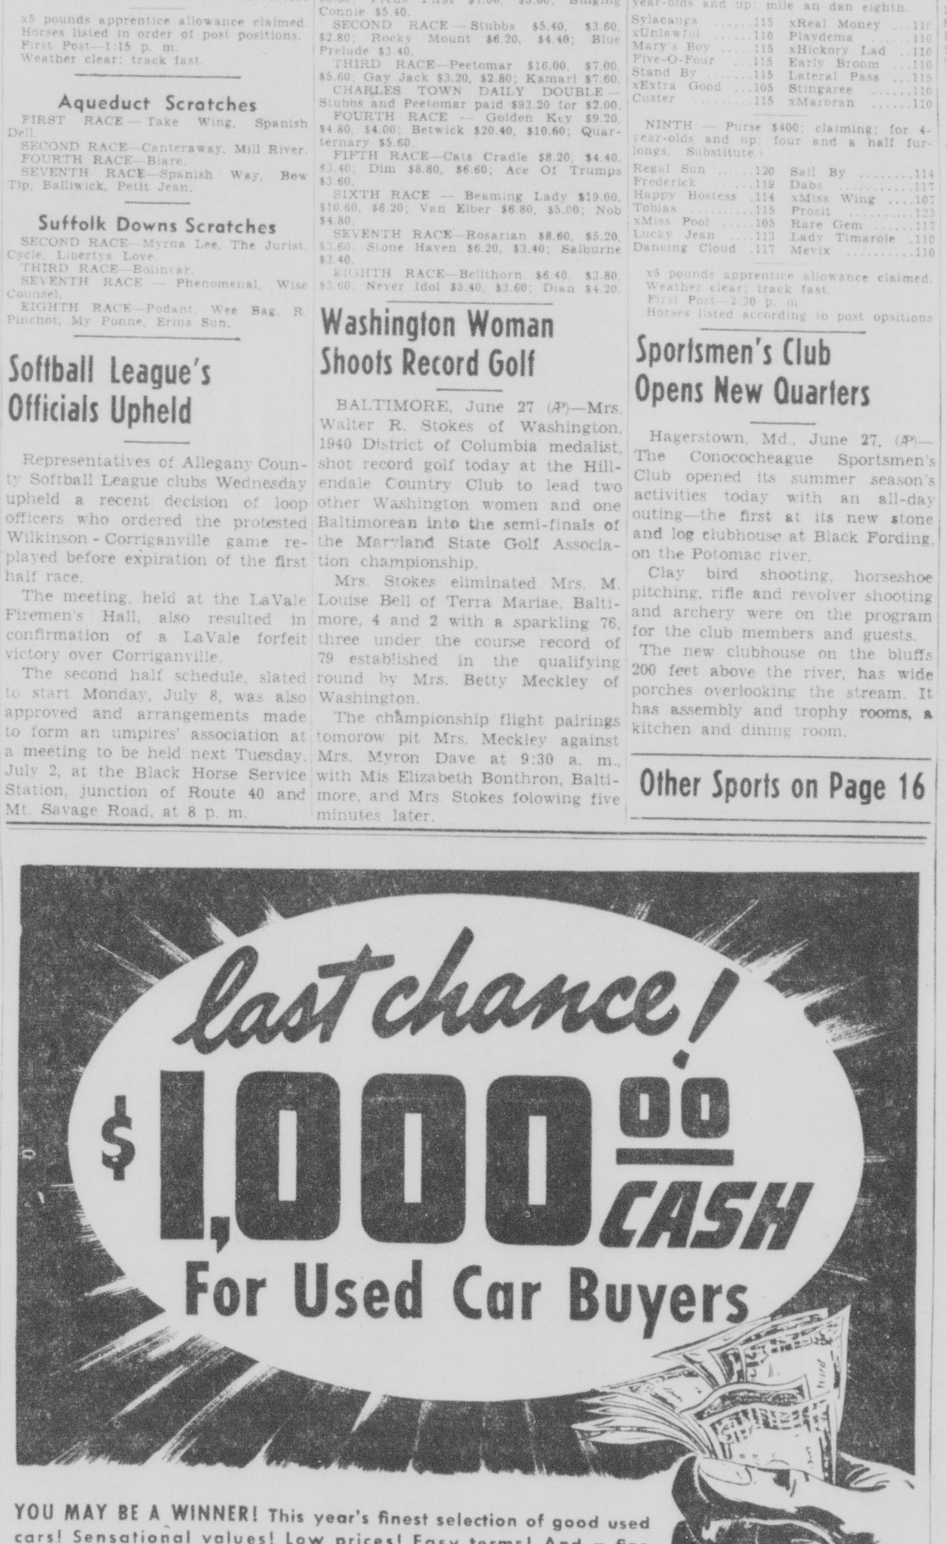

Pinchhitter Gene Kiddy delivered the winning blow for the Devon Club in the sixth with a timely single with two mates on deck and the score deadlocked at 4-4. Charles Price had a four-master and Prado socked two bingles for the winners, while Jack Dayton had a homer with one on for the losers.

The Wolverines spurted for four runs in the fourth inning to capture their encounter with the Eagles. Leo Vance and Michaels sparked the Wolverines' attack, the former getting three hits in as many appearances and the latter a triple and single. Helfestray was the big gun for the losers with a four-bagger and single.

In a postponed game, the McIntyre Bakers broke a three-game losing streak by scoring a 7-4 win over the last-place WPA-Legion combination. The win, coupled with the Eagles' loss, put the Bakers into a fifth-roost tie with the Birds.

Tom Kiddy and Mazzone had four of the victors' eight bingles, while R. Brown bashed a triple and double for the vanquished ten. Duckworth allowed the losers only four hits, but he was wild, giving out seven free tickets. The scores:

Celanese and Cold Spring Gun Clubs Take Top Honors

Hinkle Posts Perfect Score --Summer Series Opens

Luke, June 27. — Celanese and Cold Spring gunners have carried off top honors in the first and second matches of the Allegany County Rifle League's summer series, according to results announced here today by O. L. Biggs, secretary of the organization.

Celanese shooters rolled up a total of 1,921 points of a possible 2,000 to capture the first match in which Cold Spring finished second with 1,901 and Frostburg third with 1,849.

In the second match Cold Spring won with 1,928, Celanese was second with 1,918, Frostburg third with 1,888 and Company G fourth with 1,691.

N. Hinkle, Celanese ace, had the only perfect score of the two matches, both fired on the Frostburg range, and in the first contest shared individual honors with R. Bowman, a teammate, each having 395.

At least four other matches will be fired in the summer series. The dates are July 11 and 25 and August 8 and 22. If weather conditions are favorable the series will be extended to include matches on September 5 and 19.

For several years these matches have been contested from four positions, 10 shots prone, five sitting, five kneeling and 10 standing, all at 50 yards, but the current series consists of prone shooting only with 20 shots at 50 yards and 20 at 100. # Marble and Arnold Win Tennis Title

CINCINNATI, June 27 (AP)—Alice Marble, U. S. Tennis queen, and Mary Arnold teamed up to grab the National clay courts women's doubles championship 6-3, 6-4 from Helen Bernard of New York and Gracyn Wheeler of Los Angeles in a playoff late today.

The powerful overhead smashes which have led Miss Marble, U. S. Women's Champion, to the semi-finals of the Tri-State tournament here provided the necessary punch for victory in the double, rained out last week in Chicago.

Earlier Miss Marble defeated her doubles partner and fellow townswomen from Los Angeles, 6-2, 6-1, in singles matches.

Miss Bernard Trimmed Monica Nolan of Cincinnati, 6-1, 6-4, and Catherine Wolf of Eckhart, Ind., advanced with a 6-1, 6-1 decision over Ann Davis of Columbus.

Ronald Lubin of Los Angeles trimmed Alex Guerry of Chicago, 6-2, 6-1; Arthur Marx of Los Angeles upset Johnny Doeg, a former Californian 5-7, 6-3, 6-3 and Gardner Larned of Chicago downed Barney Welsh of Rockville, Md., 8-6, 3-5.

Doeg had been seeded No. 2 position. Harris Everett of Jacksonville, Fla., bested Charles Hare of England, 6-3, 4-6, 6-4, in a surprise victory.

Westernport, June 27—The first-place Devon Club tossers and the runnerup Wolverines continued their winning ways in Tri-Towns Softball League in games this week, the leaders taking a hard-fought 6-4 decision from the Oilers and the Wolverines nipping the Eagles by an 8-4 count.

Pinchhitter Gene Kiddy delivered the winning blow for the Devon Club in the sixth with a timely single with two mates on deck and the score deadlocked at 4-4. Charles Price had a four-master and Prado socked two bingles for the winners, while Jack Dayton had a homer with one on for the losers.

The Wolverines spurted for four runs in the fourth inning to capture their encounter with the Eagles. Leo Vance and Michaels sparked the Wolverines' attack, the former getting three hits in as many appearances and the latter a triple and single. Helfestray was the big gun for the losers with a four-bagger and single.

In a postponed game, the McIntyre Bakers broke a three-game losing streak by scoring a 7-4 win over the last-place WPA-Legion combination. The win, coupled with the Eagles' loss, put the Bakers into a fifth-roost tie with the Birds.

Tom Kiddy and Mazzone had four of the victors' eight bingles, while R. Brown bashed a triple and double for the vanquished ten. Duckworth allowed the losers only four hits, but he was wild, giving out seven free tickets. The scores:

War Department May Sponsor Airport Project

Byron Promises Aid, Urges City To Push Plans for WPA Help

A promise to do his utmost to put the Cumberland airport project across in Washington was made yesterday by U. S. Representative William D. Byron.

In a conference with local airport enthusiasts, Byron said the War Department might possibly pay for the whole project if sold on the military value of having an airport in Cumberland.

However, it is first necessary that the city lay the proper groundwork to the last detail, the Sixth district representative said. This would include planning a WPA project and obtaining its approval.

Once the groundwork is laid, Byron promised to take the matter up with the War Department.

Byron said he was convinced that the Cumberland airport would come in the military project classification due to the field's strategic location at the edge of the mountains and its proximity to the Atlantic seaboard and key cities of the nation.

Another vital factor cited was the proximity of the Wiley Field site to the Celanese plant, whose military importance is known, and West Virginia Pulp and Paper Company, a potential producer of activated carbon for gas masks.

If the war department can be sold on the military importance of having an airport at Cumberland, Byron said it was quite possible that the department would pay for the whole job.

Cumberland airport backers last night declared that much of the groundwork for the port has been laid already.

Mayor Harry Irvine and the city council recently took up the options on the Wiley Ford location, and the CAA has been enthusiastic over the opportunities the field offers.

VALUABLE BALL—Representative William D. Byron (left) presents to Frank F. Henson, advertising man, a baseball autographed by Robert Moses "Lefty" Grove and other stars of the Boston Red Sox. The presentation was a feature of the Red Cross benefit softball game between the Elks and the Knights of Columbus at Community Park. Plans were underway last night to auction off the ball next week, the proceeds to go to the Red Cross war relief fund.

'Collapse' of Umpire Marks Benefit Game

There are those who stoutly deny that the game Bill Cramer umpired yesterday afternoon at the Community Ball Park was soft-ball — or that Mr. Cramer is an umpire.

However, these were matters of small moment since the weather was nice, a large crowd was present and the proceeds went to the war relief fund of the American Red Cross.

Representative William D. Byron was on hand for the event and brought members of the Police Boys Club along as his guests.

Introduced by M. F. Prendergast, Rep. Byron emphasized the necessity of his presence in Congress at every session when bills of major importance are under consideration. As a member of the House naval affairs committee, he is continually on call for discussion of the rapidly moving expansion program of the navy, he said.

For this reason, it is imperative that he forgo his personal wishes to attend the affairs of his office, he said.

Rep. Byron drew the winning ticket on a baseball signed by members of the Boston Red Sox's and the ball went to Frank F. Henson.

Mayor Harry Irvine tossed the ball for the initial game between the regular softball teams of the Elks lodge and the Knights of Columbus which the Caseys won 8-4.

The second game featured the Elk Elephantines and Casey Corpulants. All players weighed 200 pounds or over.

It was at this juncture that Umpire Cramer made his appearance clad in frock coat, topper and shorts and sporting a cane and a pair of field glasses.

Umpire Cramer took his position behind the pitcher and proceeded to call balls and strikes with field glasses while seated in a rocking chair.

Eventually, Cramer became involved in an argument with various players, fled, and finally "collapsed" at third base.

The score is still undetermined.

Car Overturns, Two Injured

Girl, 16, Remains In Hospital

Two Cumberlanders enroute to visit a friend who had been ill were injured early last night when their car skidded and overturned on a gravel road near Twiggtown.

Most seriously injured was Miss Dorothy Riley, 16, of 405 Furnace street. She sustained cuts and bruises about the face and body and possible back injuries.

Jack McDonald, of Westernport, an occupant of the car, did not need hospitalization.

Both of the injured were brought to Allegany hospital by Josiah Dally, of Twiggtown. Miss Riley was admitted for observation and X-rays. Lebeck was discharged after being treated.

Hospital attendants reported Miss Riley's condition as "fairly good" last night.

Dally said he and his wife happened to meet the trio at Twiggtown, and they all decided to go to his home. He said that he had been sick and that the trio told him they were enroute to visit him.

The car driven by Lebeck overturned shortly after it ran onto a gravel road from the smooth highway, Dally added. His car was ahead of the mishap car when the crash occurred.

Lebeck's car, reportedly owned by a Paca street resident, was badly damaged.

State Police said last night that they had no report of the accident.

'Watch for the Placard', Picnickers Warned

Picnickers are warned by Dr. R. H. Riley, director of the State Department of Health to "watch for the placard" if they desire a safe outing.

"If you are looking for a place for safe drinking water, for a picnic, an overnight stay or swim in a pool, don't stop until you see the placard bearing the seal of the State of Maryland showing that the place has been duly inspected and that it meets the sanitary requirements, "Dr. Riley said.

Director Riley pointed out that each camp must comply with prescribed regulations with regard to water supply, sewage disposal, food protection and general cleanliness before it is allowed to display the seal.

It also was explained that the placards represent permits which must be renewed each year and that special swimming permits are required.

Mother and Son Hurt in Accident

Mrs. J. R. Steppe and her six-year-old son, Jack, both of Cumberland, were taken to Timmins hospital, Bedford, Pa., following an accident Monday on the Lincoln highway.

The boy received scalp lacerations. Mrs. Steppe suffered lacerations of the forehead, left elbow and left knee, and abrasions of the right leg and face.

AS THOUSANDS CHEER—With upraised arm, Rep. Joe Martin of Massachusetts, House minority leader, acknowledges cheers of Republican national convention delegates as he begins his duties as permanent chairman in Philadelphia. Minnesota's Gov. Harold E. Stassen, keynoter, who served as temporary chairman, gets ready to hand Martin his gavel.

Metropolitan Life Honors Pierce For Long Service

Sloan Warns against Socialistic Trend In Talk at Banquet

In recognition of his twenty-five years of faithful service, the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company honored its Cumberland district manager, Walter L. Pierce, with an elaborate dinner party last evening at the Ali Ghan Country Club, in which a number of his fellow citizens joined with company representatives in paying eloquent tribute to him as an outstanding community figure and an efficient insurance executive.

Resounding applause came in the speaking program when Judge D. Lindley Sloan bluntly warned the audience against the dangerous tendency toward socialism lately too much in evidence in the nation.

It is a notorious fact, the judge declared, that the government has already taken over the banks of the country, and there are those, even in high places, who are casting envious eyes upon the tremendous earnings of the people invested in life insurance and who would grab it if they only had the chance.

We should resist that with all our effort and on any and all occasions, Judge Soan said, if we are to retain stability and integrity in our society and preserve a foundation stone of our security.

Nearly 100 Attend

Upward of a hundred guests attended the event, which was presided over by G. Hoyle Wright, of the New York offices, superintendent of agencies for the Atlantic Coast territory.

Wright read letters of congratulation to Mr. Pierce from Leroy A. Lincoln, third vice-president; Arthur W. Tretheway, third vice-president; William C. Walsh, Maryland attorney-general, and Harold W. Smith, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce.

Among the speakers in addition to Judge Sloan were Mayor Harry Irvine, Magistrate Bruce, Col. George Henderson, Vincent Saccardi, of Washington, Washington district manager of the company and president of its veteran's association for the United States and Canada, and Dr. Joseph P. Franklin.

Gifts Presented

Two events, which touched the honor guest deeply, marked the program when the Cumberland staff presented Pierce with a fine target rifle and a box of ammunition; and the nursing staff presented him with a set of cuff and scarf links as tokens of esteem and affection.

Mr. Pierce began his career with the Metropolitan October 12, 1914, as an agent at Lynchburg, Va. Because of his splendid work he was rewarded with appointment to the position of assistant manager in the same district November 15, 1915. He was transferred, as assistant manager, to the Danville, Va., district October 16, 1916, and to the Staunton, Va., district March 25, 1918.

Pierce's achievements as an assistant manager were again rewarded by promotion when he was appointed to the managership of the Cumberland district July 20, 1925.

Business Doubled

Wright noted that since Pierce had been manager of the local district, the business thereof had been almost doubled. It now has $16,675,000 of insurance in force with annual receipts of $630,000 from 38,300 customers.

The extensive work of the company's educational program, its welfare division and its hospitalization and nursing services were outlined by Wright.

The protective phase of life insurance was stressed by speakers. Saccardi directed attention to the fact that it represents the assumption of a responsibility that relieves national, state and local governments of a tremendous burden that is now borne through self-help by policy holders. Within the last decade, he said, this represented the huge sum of twenty-five billion dollars.

Guests Listed

The Cumberland district staff in attendance include the following:

City Officials Lose First Round In Battle against Park Horseman

City officials yesterday morning reached into the sack and pulled forth another charge to tack up against Robert E. Beall, the lone equestrian of Constitution Park, after their first case against him was thrown out of court.

Arrested Wednesday afternoon for riding horseback in the park, Beall was acquitted momentarily yesterday morning in Police court, where it was decided he had violated no city ordinance.

However, a warrant charging Beall with trespassing on public property was promptly procured. He was released without bond pending a hearing Tuesday in Trial Magistrate's court.

While no city ordinance was broken, Mayor Harry Irvine yesterday stoutly maintained that Beall broke the park rules which declare no animals shall be allowed on the premises.

Furthermore, Beall, the owner of a riding academy near the park, has already been asked to keep his horses out, the mayor said.

The mayor said the city would have no objection to horseback riding in the park providing there were adequate facilities. As it is, the park is entirely too small and the facilities inadequate, the mayor said.

Beall was dismissed on the horseback riding charge after Magistrate Frank A. Perdew and City Attorney Charles Z. Heskett decided that no ordinance had been violated. The trespassing charge was lodged shortly afterwards.

Maple Syrup Production High in Maryland

Fifty-seven thousand maple-syrup trees are producing syrup and sugar in Maryland, although normally sugar maples are regarded primarily as typically New England trees, according to official reports by Government agriculture statisticians.

The 1940 season, the crop-reporting service announced today, was affected by heavy snows and unusually cold weather, but the Maryland maples produced 9,000 pounds of maple sugar and 24,000 gallons of maple syrup.

The weather made the Maryland maple syrup season three or four weeks later than usual and "sap runs" were small and short. Lateness of the season caused much offgrade syrup, it was said.

Loses Open Golf Crown On Last Hole Eight

The last regular round at Spring Mill saw Sam Snead take an 8 on the home hole when a par 5 would have given him the national open crown. Which left Nelson, Wood and Denny Shute deadlocked with 284's. In the first playoff, Nelson tied Wood by shooting a birdie on the home hole, while Shute was shooting himself out of the running with a 76.

Nelson and Wood will be on hand at Cleveland as will P. G. A. Champion Henry Picard, but Shute is out of action because of an operation on his right wrist last winter. It is even doubtful whether he will be on hand for the P. G. A. title play at Hershey. But all other golfing greats will be at Cleveland.

Workers Lose Fingers, Toes

Celanese Employes, Railroader Hurt

A B&O foreman and two Celanese workers underwent amputations yesterday at local hospitals after being injured at work.

The railroader, James Thomas, 51, of 734 Maryland avenue, had the third finger on his right hand badly crushed yesterday afternoon when it was caught between two rails.

The finger was amputated at Memorial hospital. He was able to return home.

The Celanese employees, George M. Habig, 47, of 324 North Centre street, and Paul Marker, 30, of Cresaptown, were injured yesterday morning.

Habig had the first and third fingers on his left hand crushed when they were caught in a machine used for bending tin. He was admitted to Allegany hospital, where both fingers had to be amputated.

About an hour after Habig was injured, Marker was admitted to the hospital with two crushed toes on his left foot. Both of the toes were amputated.

Hospital attendants were unable to say exactly how Marker was injured, but it was believed that a heavy object fell on his foot.

Habig and Marker were reported "fairly good" last night.

He's a Mayor at 23; Truck Driver Year Ago

HENDERSON, Tex. (AP)—From truck driver to mayor in one year is the record of Pete McNee, mayor of Henderson at the age of 23.

A year ago Pete and his young bride returned home sadly from Baylor University at Waco. They had been expelled for marrying secretly.

Pete took a job driving a truck. He couldn't make enough money for a couple filled with dreams. Mrs. McNee opened a business training school and it prospered. McNee quit work to help. He also helped organize the Henderson Junior Chamber of Commerce, became its first president.

His victory over Mayor M. H. Marwil and two other veteran politicians crowned a year of achievement. Friends believe he is America's youngest mayor for a city of the size of Henderson (10,000 persons).

Kiwanis To Open Sunshine Camp Monday Morning

120 Children To Get Two-Week Vacations Under New Program

Plans were complete today for the epening Monday of the Kiwanis club's new Sunshine Camp on Haystack mountain.

Members of the club heard plans for the camp outlined at their weekly luncheon-meeting yesterday at the Fort Cumberland hotel and were enthusiastic over their new project, which will provide some 120 under-privileged children with two-week summer vacations.

The first thirty boys will go to camp Monday for a two-week stay. After another two-week boys' camp, the girls will have their turn, sixty of them going in two groups for two-week vacations as guests of the club.

Joseph W. Young, chairman of the camp committee, who will be on hand for the entire camping period, announced councilors for the camp as follows:

Boys — David Weiss, Charles D. Walton Jr., Harold Hipsley and Ralph Roth. Girls—Jean Witherup, Dorothy Williams, Rebecca Sterne, and Dorothy Thrush.

Mrs. Belva Dayton, cook at the Allegany high school cafeteria, will preside at the cookstove, serving up menus prepared by the Memorial hospital dietician.

The camp, which was formerly used as the Allegany Tuberculosis Sanatorium, has been completely renovated and is described as ideal. Close to the city, the ten-acre site is well-wooded and a small stream runs through the middle of it. This stream has been dammed to provide a wading pool.

The large building, completely equipped for comfort, will provide ample accomodations for the children. A playground has been cleared, and much equipment installed.

Dr. C. L. Owens is general chairman in charge of the camp. Chairmen of sub-committees include Herbert Platt, maintenance; Fred G. Dodge, grounds; D. R. Bowie, playgrounds; G. L. Buchanan, buildings; John F. Rodman, operating; Irving Rosenbaum, house and equipment; Dr. F. Mr. Wilson, welfare; Harvey H. Weiss, finance; Lloyd Rawlings, budget; and Harold W. Smith, publicity.

Budget for the first year of operations has been set at $4,600, financed altogether by the club.

The club formerly sent a group of some fifty boys to the YMCA camp on the South branch of the Potomac, but leased the sanatorium site in order to expand its program.

The first contingent of boys will meet at 9:30 a. m. Monday at the Public Safety building to be transported to the camp in cars.

War Department May Sponsor Airport Project

Byron Promises Aid, Urges City To Push Plans for WPA Help

A promise to do his utmost to put the Cumberland airport project across in Washington was made yesterday by U. S. Representative William D. Byron.

In a conference with local airport enthusiasts, Byron said the War Department might possibly pay for the whole project if sold on the military value of having an airport in Cumberland.

However, it is first necessary that the city lay the proper groundwork to the last detail, the Sixth district representative said. This would include planning a WPA project and obtaining its approval.

Once the groundwork is laid, Byron promised to take the matter up with the War Department.

Byron said he was convinced that the Cumberland airport would come in the military project classification due to the field's strategic location at the edge of the mountains and its proximity to the Atlantic seaboard and key cities of the nation.

Another vital factor cited was the proximity of the Wiley Field site to the Celanese plant, whose military importance is known, and West Virginia Pulp and Paper Company, a potential producer of activated carbon for gas masks.

If the war department can be sold on the military importance of having an airport at Cumberland, Byron said it was quite possible that the department would pay for the whole job.

Cumberland airport backers last night declared that much of the groundwork for the port has been laid already.

Mayor Harry Irvine and the city council recently took up the options on the Wiley Ford location, and the CAA has been enthusiastic over the opportunities the field offers.

VALUABLE BALL—Representative William D. Byron (left) presents to Frank F. Henson, advertising man, a baseball autographed by Robert Moses "Lefty" Grove and other stars of the Boston Red Sox. The presentation was a feature of the Red Cross benefit softball game between the Elks and the Knights of Columbus at Community Park. Plans were underway last night to auction off the ball next week, the proceeds to go to the Red Cross war relief fund.

Car Overturns, Two Injured

Girl, 16, Remains In Hospital

Two Cumberlanders enroute to visit a friend who had been ill were injured early last night when their car skidded and overturned on a gravel road near Twiggtown.

Most seriously injured was Miss Dorothy Riley, 16, of 405 Furnace street. She sustained cuts and bruises about the face and body and possible back injuries.

James Lebeck, 21, of 526 North Mechanic street, driver of the car, suffered minor cuts about the head and bruises. A finger nail on his right hand was torn off.

Jack McDonald, of Westernport, an occupant of the car, did not need hospitalization.

Both of the injured were brought to Allegany hospital by Josiah Dally, of Twiggtown. Miss Riley was admitted for observation and X-rays. Lebeck was discharged after being treated.

Hospital attendants reported Miss Riley's condition as "fairly good" last night.

Dally said he and his wife happened to meet the trio at Twiggtown, and they all decided to go to his home. He said that he had been sick and that the trio told him they were enroute to visit him.

The car driven by Lebeck overturned shortly after it ran onto a gravel road from the smooth highway, Dally added. His car was ahead of the mishap car when the crash occurred.

Lebeck's car, reportedly owned by a Paca street resident, was badly damaged.

State Police said last night that they had no report of the accident.

'Watch for the Placard', Picnickers Warned

Picnickers are warned by Dr. R. H. Riley, director of the State Department of Health to "watch for the placard" if they desire a safe outing.

"If you are looking for a place for safe drinking water, for a picnic, an overnight stay or swim in a pool, don't stop until you see the placard bearing the seal of the State of Maryland showing that the place has been duly inspected and that it meets the sanitary requirements," Dr. Riley said.

Director Riley pointed out that each camp must comply with prescribed regulations with regard to water supply, sewage disposal, food protection and general cleanliness before it is allowed to display the seal.

It also was explained that the placards represent permits which must be renewed each year and that special swimming permits are required.

Mother and Son Hurt in Accident

Mrs. J. R. Steppe and her six-year-old son, Jack, both of Cumberland, were taken to Timmins hospital, Bedford, Pa., following an accident Monday on the Lincoln highway.

The boy received scalp lacerations. Mrs. Steppe suffered lacerations of the forehead, left elbow and left knee, and abrasions of the right leg and face.

'Collapse' of Umpire Marks Benefit Game

There are those who stoutly deny that the game Bill Cramer umpired yesterday afternoon at the Community Ball Park was soft-ball — or that Mr. Cramer is an umpire.

However, these were matters of small moment since the weather was nice, a large crowd was present and the proceeds went to the war relief fund of the American Red Cross.

Representative William D. Byron was on hand for the event and brought members of the Police Boys Club along as his guests.

Introduced by M. F. Prendergast, Rep. Byron emphasized the necessity of his presence in Congress at every session when bills of major importance are under consideration. As a member of the House naval affairs committee, he is continually on call for discussion of the rapidly moving expansion program of the navy, he said.

For this reason, it is imperative that he forgo his personal wishes to attend the affairs of his office, he said.

Rep. Byron drew the winning ticket on a baseball signed by members of the Boston Red Sox's and the ball went to Frank F. Henson.

Mayor Harry Irvine tossed the ball for the initial game between the regular softball teams of the Elks lodge and the Knights of Columbus which the Caseys won 8-4.

The second game featured the Elk Elephantines and Casey Corpulants. All players weighed 200 pounds or over.

It was at this juncture that Umpire Cramer made his appearance clad in frock coat, topper and shorts and sporting a cane and a pair of field glasses.

Umpire Cramer took his position behind the pitcher and proceeded to call balls and strikes with field glasses while seated in a rocking chair.

Eventually, Cramer became involved in an argument with various players, fled, and finally "collapsed" at third base.

Girls dressed as Red Cross nurses came to the rescue in an ambulance. The umpire was revived and the game called.

The score is still undetermined.

Metropolitan Life Honors Pierce For Long Service

Sloan Warns against Socialistic Trend In Talk at Banquet

In recognition of his twenty-five years of faithful service, the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company honored its Cumberland district manager, Walter L. Pierce, with an elaborate dinner party last evening at the Ali Ghan Country Club, in which a number of his fellow citizens joined with company representatives in paying eloquent tribute to him as an outstanding community figure and an efficient insurance executive.

Resounding applause came in the speaking program when Judge D. Lindley Sloan bluntly warned the audience against the dangerous tendency toward socialism lately too much in evidence in the nation.

It is a notorious fact, the judge declared, that the government has already taken over the banks of the country, and there are those, even in high places, who are casting envious eyes upon the tremendous earnings of the peope invested in life insurance and who would grab it if they only had the chance.

We should resist that with all our effort and on any and all occasions, Judge Soan said, if we are to retain stability and integrity in our society and preserve a foundation stone of our security.

Nearly 100 Attend

Upward of a hundred guests attended the event, which was presided over by G. Hoyle Wright, or the New York offices, superintendent of agencies for the Atlantic Coast territory.

Wright read letters of congratulation to Mr. Pierce from Leroy A. Lincoln, third vice-president; Arthur W. Tretheway, third vice-president; William C. Walsh, Maryland attorney-general, and Harold W. Smith, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce.

Among the speakers in addition to Judge Sloan were Mayor Harry Irvine, Magistrate Bruce, Col. George Henderson, Vincent Saccardi, of Washington, Washington district manager of the company and president of its veteran's association for the United States and Canada, and Dr. Joseph P. Franklin.

Gifts Presented

Two events, which touched the honor guest deeply, marked the program when the Cumberland staff presented Pierce with a fine target rifle and a box of ammunition; and the nursing staff presented him with a set of cuff and scarf links as tokens of esteem and affection.

Mr. Pierce began his career with the Metropolitan October 12, 1914, as an agent at Lynchburg, Va. Because of his splendid work he was rewarded with appointment to the position of assistant manager in the same district November 15, 1915. He was transferred, as assistant manager, to the Danville, Va., district October 16, 1916, and to the Staunton, Va., district March 25, 1918.

Pierce's achievements as an assistant manager were again rewarded by promotion when he was appointed to the managership of the Cumberland district July 20, 1925.

Business Doubled

Wright noted that since Pierce had been manager of the local district, the business thereof had been almost doubled. It now has $16,675,000 of insurance in force with annual receipts of $630,000 from 38,300 customers.

The extensive work of the company's educational program, its welfare division and its hospitalization and nursing services were outlined by Wright.

The protective phase of life insurance was stressed by speakers. Saccardi directed attention to the fact that it represents the assumption of a responsibility that relieves national, state and local governments of a tremendous burden that is now borne through self-help by policy holders. Within the last decade, he said, this represented the huge sum of twenty-five billion dollars.

City Officials Lose First Round In Battle against Park Horseman

City officials yesterday morning reached into the sack and pulled forth another charge to tack up against Robert E. Beall, the lone equestrian of Constitution Park, after their first case against him was thrown out of court.

Arrested Wednesday afternoon for riding horseback in the park, Beall was acquitted momentarily yesterday morning in Police court, where it was decided he had violated no city ordinance.

However, a warrant charging Beall with trespassing on public property was promptly procured. He was released without bond pending a hearing Tuesday in Trial Magistrate's court.

While no city ordinance was broken, Mayor Harry Irvine yesterday stoutly maintained that Beall broke the park rules which declare no animals shall be allowed on the premises.

Furthermore, Beall, the owner of a riding academy near the park, has already been asked to keep his horses out, the mayor said.

The mayor said the city would have no objection to horseback riding in the park providing there were adequate facilities. As it is, the park is entirely too small and the facilities inadequate, the mayor said.

Beall was dismissed on the horseback riding charge after Magistrate Frank A. Perdew and City Attorney Charles Z. Heskett decided that no ordinance had been violated. The trespassing charge was lodged shortly afterwards.

Maple Syrup Production High in Maryland

Fifty-seven thousand maple-syrup trees are producing syrup and sugar in Maryland, although normally sugar maples are regarded primarily as typically New England trees, according to official reports by Government agriculture statisticians.

The 1940 season, the crop-reporting service announced today, was affected by heavy snows and unusually cold weather, but the Maryland maples produced 9,000 pounds of maple sugar and 24,000 gallons of maple syrup.

The weather made the Maryland maple syrup season three or four weeks later than usual and "sap runs" were small and short. Lateness of the season caused much off-grade syrup, it was said.

Nelson and Wood will be on hand at Cleveland as will P. G. A. Champion Henry Picard, but Shute is out of action because of an operation on his right wrist last winter. It is even doubtful whether he will be on hand for the P. G. A. title play at Hershey. But all other golfing greats will be at Cleveland.
